RAILROAD INCIDENT.—Railroad men in the discharge of their duties often experience rich things which seldom become public. We will give one case. One of that class of individuals who are always "dead broke" had occasion to go to Columbus one day last week, and made up his mind, as a preliminary, that he would travel on his good looks. Having thus decided, he took a seat in the splendid saloon cars of the Central Ohio Railroad, putting on as many airs as if he had a pocket full of "rocks." The train had nearly reached Claypool's, before the Conductor, whom we call Jones had reached our dead-head friend in his round of collecting tickets and fare.

'Your ticket, if you please, said the Conductor.
'Haven't any,' said dead head.
'Where are you going?' inquired the Conductor.
'Columbus,' replied dead head.
'$2 10,' said Jones.
'Haven't nary stamp,' remarked our dead head acquaintance.
'You must pay your fare, or get off the train,' said the Conductor.
'Stop her,' quietly remarked our dead head.

The train was stopped, and he was left on the side of the road, to await, as he said, the next train, on which he succeeded in getting. The same scene transpired, ending by dead-head telling the conductor to 'stop her,' and he being again left on the side of the road. Train after train was boarded, and each put him off a little nearer Columbus. The last train on which he got was that of our friend Jones, who was on his return trip from Be laire to Columbus. Dead-head got on his train at Pataskala; and it was under full headway before he being discovered by the Conductor.

'Going to Columbus again, I suppose,' remarked Jones.
'Haven't been there yet,' said dead-head. I can't get to ride more than six miles before they put me off. I don't think I'll have to get on more than one or two trains after your'n before Columbus will be the putting off place.
'Well, do you think we can carry you unless you pay your fare?' inquired Jones.
'Stop her,' quietly remarked dead-head.

'Well, I do think,' said Jones, 'of all brassy individuals I have ever met, you rather head them all. I'll take you there for your infernal impudence, nothing else,' and dead-head was carried into Columbus, on the same train he started on there days before.—Zanesville Signal.

PRINTERS.—Printers beat the Dutch and everybody beat their wives. We have one in the Press office who preached the gospel, ran a side show to a circus, kept a singing school, ran away with a man's wife and two children, practiced medicine, been agent for a concert troupe, and clerk on a steamboat. He has now reformed, and settled down to a legitimate business—that of sticking type. We'll make a man of him yet.—Exchange
