[COMPILED FROM THE OREGONIAN.]

DATES TO MAY 13.

Washington, May 13.—Judge Underwood, who arrived yesterday morning from Norfolk, with a copy of the indictment against Jeff. Davis for treason, was in consultation all day with Assistant Attorney General Ashton Speed being temporarily absent in Kentucky. It is currently stated that Jeff. will be tried on this indictment when the United States Circuit Court reassembles at Richmond, to which place it is now adjourned to meet early in June; that Chief Justice Chase will preside, and that Attorney General Speed will be assisted in the prosecution by Ex-Governor Clifford, of Mass., and Mr. M. Everett, of New York. The text of the indictment is not yet made public, but it is said to be similar to the bill reported by the Grand Jury of Alexandria several months since, which the Government did not prosecute. Judge Underwood's charge to the Grand Jury on Tuesday, May 8th, clearly sets forth their duty to act fearlessly, even though their fidelity might bring them enemies and murderous assaults as had been the case with a previous grand jury. In this connection he adverted to his charge to the grand jury preceding them, and said he would not express himself now as he believed they all knew the sentiments he had expressed. Since then peace had been declared, the writ of habeas corpus restored; recently President Johnson had expressed a desire that no such subordinates as Wirtz should be brought to punishment for treason, but that the chief traitors should be tried; it was against these leading offenders that he would have them act, and punish the principals not the tools. It had been decided that such offenders must be tried in Virginia. At the North there had been much complaint of the tardiness in bringing them to trial.—The delay had been unavoidable. There was no need for further delay, however, and he hoped the time had come when it would be shown that treason was held here as a crime meriting the highest punishment. He urged that the most of the people of the State who sided with rebellion and took up arms could not be held accountable for treason. Those who had imposed upon the credulity and ignorance of the masses, and incited them to rebel against the Government he would have punished. There was no obstacle in the way of bringing indictments against all the leaders in this rebellion, paroled prisoners as well as the unparoled.

Judge Underwood announced that Justice Chase would be in attendance to preside in June. The grand jury then retired, and on Thursday brought in an indictment against Jeff. Davis, when Judge Underwood adjourned the Court to Richmond.

The judiciary committee who have been making inquiries as to what evidence exists in regard to Jeff. Davis' complicity in the assassination of Lincoln, have been unable to get any response from the Secretary of State showing the reasons for the famous proclamation of May, 1865. It is understood that the committee will call on the President before making a report to the House.

"Spring is coming."—The Vedette says that the decisions of Judge Drake, of the U. S. Court of Utah, denying the right of the Probate Courts, to issue naturalization papers and refusing American citizenship to polygamists, have excited much comment and caused some frothy words from the pack of law-defying polygamists of Utah. We have but one consolation to extend to them. It is offered after the style of Police Judge Clinton of this city, in his remarks to a citizen who had resented an insult offered to his wife, "Spring is coming and if you do not like the laws of the United States you can leave." How does the boot appear when placed on the other foot?

The celebrated Donald McDonald, better known as "Wells," has returned to Idaho and resumed his old occupation as a miner. Some of his old friends at Centerville gave him a reception on his return, firing a few anvils and getting generally jolly. McDonald has certainly won all the congratulations which he received.

The Boise Trade.—Sacramento papers notice the departure of a large number of wagons, heavily freighted, for the Boise country. The dull times complained of by our Portland friends, is doubtless owing to the fact that so much of the trade and travel from California to Boise goes overland.—W. W. Statesman.

It is proposed to hold a National Labor Convention in Baltimore, in December next, to take steps to secure the passage of Eight Hour laws in all the States, and for other purposes connected with the interests of labor.
