WORTH TRYING.

Bend's next "clean-up" campaign might do worse than to put into practice some such plan as used by Alameda, as set forth in the following Oregonian editorial:

"Alameda, Cal., has adopted a plan, in connection with its clean-up movement, of placarding the premises of its citizens with signs bearing the words, 'dirty,' 'very dirty,' and the like, to express the condemnation of the Board of Health of the condition to which reference is thus publicly made. The idea, of course, is to shame the owner, or tenant, into doing the duty that he ought to do without especial urging.

"The Board of Health is armed with full power, and tearing down the notices is heavily penalized. It is only fair to say that it is not found necessary to make use of the system in many instances, but it has proved effective in stimulating among people generally a new desire for an attractive city—which we all want, if our attention is called to it.

"The force of example is contagious, as anyone who has traveled will realize, there being some cities that are clean by habit and others that are quite the reverse, and from the same cause."

LOSS OF OUMET TO GOLF IS GREAT ONE

Ousting From Amateur Ranks Regretted by Many—Was a Star at Age of 21.

By H. C. Hamilton
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—When the United States Golf Association voted at its last meeting to uphold its definition of an amateur and by so doing put Francis Ouimet on the footing of a professional golfer, it robbed amateur golf of one of the most sensational figures it ever possessed in this country.

In spite of the fact that the post-mendable in that it made no distinction of the golf association was common between Ouimet or some lesser players, golfers the nation over never will erase from their memories the spectacle of a slight youth, evenly playing his way around a golf course and defeating Ray and Vardon, England's two greatest golfers.

Francis Ouimet was barely 21 when he accomplished that feat. He sprang to fame in a blaze of glory in a day. He placed American amateur golf on a par with that played

GRAFT ACCUSATIONS STIR CHICAGO; POLICE OFFICIALS AND OTHERS ARRESTED

Chicago is greatly stirred by the accusations of grafting made against former Superintendent of Police Charles M. C. Healey, Lieutenant Martin White and others who were arrested. Warrants were issued for other policemen by State Attorney Maclay Hoynes.

Healey was immediately released on bonds of $100,000. The charges against him are extortion, bribery and conspiracy. He was to be reinstated as a captain of police, with an immediate leave of absence of twenty-nine days. It was announced this in accordance with a police department rule granting leave during investigation of charges against officers. Former Deputy Chief Schuettler now heads the department.

Mr. Hoynes issued a statement in which he said a "great majority" of the captains and lieutenants of police of the city were involved in the scandal.

The former chief, whose recent resignation was accepted, was arrested at his home. Lieutenant White, Thomas Costello, alleged go between and personal agent of the chief, "Mike de Pike" Heitler, so called "king" of the former west side Tenderloin, and William Skidmore, a politician and saloonkeeper, were arrested in a raid on Costello's office.

According to Mr. Hoynes, they were engaged in dividing money collected in "tribute." Some of the money, he said, bore the serial numbers previously noted by his agents while it was in the possession of resort keepers.
