MANY PROMINENT MEN TRAP-SHOOTERS

Rulers of Nations, Statesmen and Business Leaders Numbered Among Sport's Devotees.

By H. C. Hamilton, (United Press Staff Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, March 20.—Interesting figures compiled by Peter P. Carney, Philadelphia booster of trap-shooting, show that many men, well known in this country, are ardent devotees of the trap game.

Among them he names Vice President Thomas H. Marshall, King George of England, King Alfonso of Spain, King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, Gov. Walter E. Edge of New Jersey, Gov. Brambaugh of Pennsylvania, Gov. Capper of Kansas, former Gov. Major of Missouri, former Gov. West of Oregon, Gov. Ferguson of Texas, John Phillip Sousa, the bandmaster, and many lesser lights in the public light.

Theodore Roosevelt and Amos Pinchot, Carney writes, are two men who long ago realized the value of outdoor exercise as personified in the use of a gun, but these two, he admits never displayed any great hankering for the tame method of killing birds built of clay.

Carney picks out a few mayors, for public approval, who are trap enthusiasts. Charles A. Fleming, mayor of Spokane, he says, broke 90 per cent of the targets thrown for him at the Northwest Sportsmen's association shoot last summer.

R. E. Duval, mayor of Belleville, Ill., a year ago tied for first place in the Southern Trapshooting Handicap at Memphis.

Mayor Thomas B. Smith of Philadelphia, is a member of a gun club and often takes part in contests.

MAKES NEW TORPEDO

Charles J. Field Perfects Magnetic Controlled War Engine.

(By United Press to the Bend Bulletin)

WILLISTON, N. D., March 20.—Charles J. Field, grandson of Cyrus K. Field, the man who laid the first trans-Atlantic cable and turned it over to the American government, has invented a torpedo, designed to guide itself to the ship by magnetism and remains there until its explosion, which is controlled by a timing device. Government tests credit the torpedo with seven out of eight perfect explosions.

CLAIMS HIGH SPEED

(By United Press to the Bend Bulletin)

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 20.—Paul Rieckel, 23, today claimed that he can fly across the ocean in 40 hours by using in his engine a certain oil formula he claims to have perfected. He has sent this formula to the U. S. government as a gift. Whether it has been tested is not known.
