In the mad scramble for gold, we seldom pause to take stock of the inner man and to compare our spiritual progress with that of our pocketbooks. We are frequently content to devote our attention to the purse and let the minister look after our souls as best he might. That was the attitude which was taken by the wealthy parishoners of the church over which the Rev. Phillip Strong presided and so long as he preached stirring sermons and did not press them too hard for contributions, they were very contented. But when Strong suddenly wakes to the realization that he is not living up to his own teaching and devotes himself to the tremendous task of struggling against the very forces which he has allowed to dominate the congregation before him, they are furious with resentment. He wages open warfare against those members of his flock who are behind the liquor interests and so jeopardizes his own safety that he is finally killed by the frightful tension of his ceaseless battles and struggles in behalf of humanity.

In the course of the conflict against evil, Strong loses his child and his wife deserts him, but he battles courageously on, spurred to higher achievements by Spirit of Man, the symbol of Christ among men. This is in brief the story of "The Martyrdom of Phillip Strong," a Paramount Picture adapted from the celebrated works of the Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, featuring Robert Conness and Mabel Trunelle. It is the featured attraction at the Bend Theatre on Thursday and Friday, with the 12th episode of the Shielding Shadow, "The Hidden Money."

Grand Theatre

Little Peggy Hyland, in the Blue Ribbon feature, "Her Right to Live," which was directed by Paul Scardon, and which is the attraction at the Grand Theatre on Thursday and Friday, proves to her many friends that it was not so very long ago that she really was a child.

In this story, Miss Hyland plays with the Vitagraph kiddies, Bobby and Helen Connelly and Mildred May. Delighted with her fellow-players, the little star would romp all day about the studio with them, with the result that when they went into the scene they simply kept right on playing with their "big sister."

Entirely forgetful of her dignity as a motion picture star, the tiny English actress would enter into all the sports; and her delight over the fishing party, when they all take off their shoes and stockings and go paddling, is plain to be seen. Her eyes fairly dance with happiness as she runs through the woods with the three children and their big dog, Rover.

But she is insulted—oh so insulted, when an artist terms her a "kid" along with the others.

In this role of the older sister, who cares for her chicks like a little brown sparrow cares for the fledglings in the nest, Peggy Hyland finds a part ideally suited to her capabilities, and she is more charming than ever before.

MAY DRAFT HOBOES FOR THE U. S. ARMY

"Slackers' Lane" in Chicago, May Be Scene of Old-Fashioned Press Gang Raids Soon.

(By United Press to the Bend Bulletin)
CHICAGO, May 16.—Tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are marching, but they won't enlist, seasoned old campaigners of the road though they be. These particular "boys"—whose summer rendezvous is the Chicago "slave market" on Madison street near the river, are variously known as bindle stiffs, ear-chewers and members of the Complete Rest Society. Because of their numerous presence in the block which boasts more employment offices than any other in the world, recruiting offices have dubbed the place "Slackers' Lane."

There are perhaps 2500 of these knights of the highway. With other citizens who toll not nor spin, they have been wintering in Southern California and Florida, but now they are flocking back to their old haunts. Why they congregate among the employment agencies, nobody knows. The agencies mean nothing to them. Because of these agencies, the I. W. W. dubbed that part of Madison street the "slave market."

At foraging for provisions, recruiting officers believe that these gentlemen would prove an asset to any army. Uncle Sam needs fighters, but when the recruiters invaded "Slackers' Lane" their appeals went unheard.

"What has the government ever done for me," was a stock reply. The mobilization of unemployed grows greater daily. With selective conscription as authority, old-fashioned "press gang" raids may be directed against the slave market.

STATE TO RELINQUISH BENHAM FALLS TITLE

Resolution of State Engineer Expected to Be Passed by Desert Land Board Next Meeting.

SALEM, May 16.—Information obtained from members of the Desert Land Board today indicates that the resolution of State Engineer Lewis as to the Benham Falls project near Bend probably will pass the Board at its next meeting, which will be some time this week.

The resolution of Mr. Lewis provides for relinquishing all of the state's right, title and interest to the Benham Falls project of approximately 74,000 acres and turning it over to the Department of the Interior for final disposition by that department.

No protests have been received from Central Oregon as to the resolution, while, on the other hand, word has been received here indirectly that the people of Bend and vicinity are generally in favor of the proposal.

It is considered possible that an effort will be made at the meeting to amend the resolution so that it will include a recommendation that the land be kept intact for future reclamation development and that it be not thrown open to homestead entry. Such an amendment probably would meet with disapproval from a large number of people in Central Oregon who have urged disposition of the lands under the project.
