BRITISH ROYALTY REMAINS UNSHAKEN

People of England Have No Fault to Find With King, and Labor Has No Thought of Outbreak.

By Lowell Mellett,
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
LONDON, May 23.—In the days immediately following the abdication of the Czar, one frequently heard this: "King George next!" One seldom hears it now. A revolution like Russia's clearly is not in the public mind.

The people of England have no particular fault to find with their king. References to his German blood are commonplace, but this is regarded as his misfortune rather than his fault and there is none to say he has not played up to his part as an Englishman.

Any dissatisfaction that may have been felt at any time with the management of England's part in the war was not directed against the king. Incidentally, it would be hard to find any dissatisfaction on that score since the new advance on the west front has begun.

It is the same with social unrest.
Sufferers from economic conditions —war-made or otherwise—do not lay the blame at the door of the Buckingham Palace. The expense of maintaining the English throne lays little burden on the people. Whereas confiscating the Czar's lands meant adding an estate as large as all Germany and almost as rich in resources to the public wealth, such a confiscation in Great Britain would make only an imperceptible increase. For years it has been a boast of England that royalty is supported here at less expense than in any other important country.

Persistent inquiry reveals that the labor forces of this country have no thought of anti-monarchical outbreak, political or otherwise. Labor leaders have their minds focused on industrial problems of the present, and, even more, on the great problems that must be faced when the armies are demobilized.

They will tell you that if anybody is agitating the abolishment of hereditary monarchy in England it is not the workers. The monarchy, they agree, plays too little part in the relations between employees and employers to justify any objections on their part. Some even suggested that an anti-monarchical demonstration may be fomented by quite other forces. These other forces are represented—in this view—by the general term capital. Capital, it is argued, would fall in with a program calculated to divert public attention from industrial trouble. Big employers would sacrifice the throne to save their profits, according to this argument.

RIFLES MUST DRILL OR LEAVE COMPANY

New and Modern Arms Will Be Asked From Government—"Honorary" Members Not Wanted.

Captain F. R. Prince, of the Bend Rifles, has made the following statement of the work and purposes of the organization:

"The following men did not report to drill Monday night, and many of these have missed several drills. It is desired that those who are not interested, drop out and sell their uniforms to others who attend but are unable to be outfitted because of delays of the supply houses. New and modern rifles are to be asked for providing good attendance is secured at drills, but it would be an absolute waste of time to ask the government to support any other than a live organization. The list:
"Sergeants Beagan, Leary; Corporals K. E. Sawyer, Frazier; Privates Hosmer, Elkins, Stevens, Hunt, Lyons, Colvey, Whisnant, Pringle, Smith, R. M., Smith, C. R., Dever-aux, Mannheim, Meyers, Clarno, Rogers, Bond, Wilson, Wilcox, Wiggins, Houston, Ross, Foley, Havard, Vandevent.

"Some of the above reported, gave good reason why they could not attend, and were excused. I am giving good time to this work and am doing it for a very certain purpose, and am very pleased with the work of those who attend at least once each week, thereby showing their loyalty and interest. I would like to have the resignations of those in the above list who have signed applications, but do not intend to drill.
I do not wish any "honorary" members.
FRANK R. PRINCE,
Captain Bend Rifles."

Superstitions of the Sea.

The persons who sail as passengers on a ship which does not regularly carry passengers are looked upon either with favor or disfavor by the crew.
The presence of a child is thought to be a good omen, while women are believed to bring bad luck. Lawyers are looked upon with greatest dislike, for they are considered particularly unlucky. The name "sea lawyer" is the worst term one sailor can use toward another.

A cat on board ship is supposed to cause the vessel to meet with gales.
The old saying is, "A cat carries a gale in her tail," and the average sailor believes that when a cat frisks about the deck she is raising a storm. Pigs also have a bad reputation on shipboard.

Warns Against War Influence.

"One thing, if nothing else, I want to leave with you. Don't let the war cause you to slow down in your business or in any program of improvement which you may have contemplated. If you do, we will have a business depression, and then we will be in a mighty bad fix when it comes to absorbing the nation's war loan.

"Road work will not be pursued at the expense of the farm labor supply. In the first place, the two classes of labor are entirely different, and in the second place you must credit the members of the commission with having a little common sense."
