

Russians Vote on Everything They do Since Revolution

PETROGRAD, June 26—Every theory, every belief, every injustice, every problem of poverty and of affluence and of labor—is being voted on in Russia today.

Meetings by the thousands are being held. The Russian people are dividing themselves along the lines of professions and occupations and in their meetings the smallest problems are brought up. In a meeting of wash-women in Petrograd the other day, for instance, the women went so far as to discuss their social standing.

"We want an eight hour day," declared one wash-woman, "we want to have time every day to visit our friends and enjoy life."

"No, No," declared the next speaker. "What we want is more work. I want to get all the work I can do and work as long as I please. I have no friends to visit."

"That woman is wrong," declared a third, "if we haven't got any friends to visit, it's because we've never had time to make friends as other people do. What we need is more friends and more time to enjoy them."

Utter and absolute free speech exists; only this could make possible the infinity of the number of matters that are being discussed by the people of seething Russia. Folks are free to talk against each other. Only yesterday, for instance the soldiers of the 12th army at the front decided that the Czar was not being guarded with sufficient care in his palace. They passed a resolution to that effect and the resolution reached Minister of War Kerensky.

"The ex-Czar is giving liquor to the soldiers who are guarding him," was one of the charges.

Kerensky went to Tsarko Selo to look into the matter. He found that, according to a long established custom at the palace, the guards were being given a bottle of wine every day. He laid the matter before the troops guarding the palace.

"Yes," they replied. "We receive a bottle of wine every day from the Czar's cellars. We are only following an ancient custom—but if we are being criticised for it by the soldiers of the 12th army, we will discontinue the practice."

Wherefore, in solemn assembly, they voted to abolish a pleasant and therefore, somewhat lingering custom of Tsarko Selo.

People in Russia vote at the drop of the hat—on any subject.

The third impression I received as an American, was a sense of bewilderment at the problem of getting all this voting translated into laws.

The voting is not vague and unsystematic. Spontaneously a system has grown up out of the old organizations, whereby national organizations of all sorts are developing.

A few washerwomen, for instance, or a few farmers, in some extremely remote district hold a meeting and elect a delegate to a meeting of washerwomen or farmers in some nearby town. This larger meeting, in turn, elects a delegate to a convention in a still larger center and finally, delegates are chosen to represent a still larger district in the main organization which is being formed here at the capital. There is a bewildering number of such organizations, with an unaccountable number of repetitions.

A man, for instance, may be a member of a soldiers' organization; he may also belong to an organization of his craft and, in addition, he may vote in an organization of Ukrainians, or Letts, or Poles. There is no limit to the number of places in which he may express his opinion and have his votes counted.

How the new government, out of all the mass of public opinion—and there's never been so much public opinion anywhere in the world as there is in Russia now—will be able to sift the preponderating causes is a bewildering problem, but it is one that the new government is determined to solve.

FAST SMOKER CARD STAGED

JACK WAGNER AND FRED GILBERT WILL SPEED OVER THE 10-ROUND HIGHWAY — BOTH MEN ARE FAST.

Manager W. L. Doudlah has signed up a creditable looking card for the smoker to be held in the Hippodrome under the auspices of the Bend Athletic club Monday evening, July 2.

Jack Wagner, of Portland, will take the leading role against Fred Gilbert, of Bend, in a 10-round match. If Wagner is half as good as he is reputed by Portland experts, he will give the local mittster the toughest go he has had in a long time.

Of Wagner, and the coming go, the Oregonian of last Sunday says:

"Jack Wagner, the rugged Portland lightweight who put the skids under Harry Casey, the Seattle whirlwind recently, has signed to box Fred Gilbert, lightweight champion of Central Oregon, in Bend, on July 2. They will step over the 10-round distance and it should be one of the best battles ever staged in that city."

"Wagner is one of the foremost contenders for the northwest lightweight championship and is a clever two-fisted boxer. He carries a knockout punch in either hand and has an uppercut that few can get away from. After his bout with Gilbert, Jack will go after Muff Bronson, Pete Mitchell and Lloyd Madden to pave his way to the title."

"In Gilbert he will be meeting a tough customer who has a reputation for rough battling. In most of his bouts Fred has stopped his opponents before the distance has been covered."

"All Wagner has to say about Gilbert is, 'the harder they battle the better I like it. They cannot come too fast for me.' Gilbert thinks otherwise and expects to put the Rose City mixer in slumberland before the tenth round comes up."

Frank McKeenan, who is toughening himself in a warehouse at Madras throwing grain sacks, is getting into good shape to meet Gus Davis, who is shoving lumber through the Brooks-Scanlon box factory. Davis is a brother of Tracy Davis, of Everett, who has been something of a sensation in the Sound country.

Ted Hoke and Al Bray, two local boys have been signed for a six-round go. Both Bray and Hoke have boxed considerably in Bend and their performances are well known. Kid Bosco, who has always been a mirth maker for local boxing fans, will go over the four-round route with Young Jack Allen.

Tickets are now on sale for the match.

sidewalks before the quaint two-story houses with the gable roofs. In the center of the public square they placed the fountain which sings a happy song of peace and contentment in the first part of the picture as it tinkles into the large stone basin.

But the enemy is merciless in its effort to gain victory, and suddenly the peaceful inhabitants are startled by the bursting of a shell in the village square. As they flee hither and thither in confusion, the people run from the different houses and the enemy may be seen pressing forward in the distance. Now one aircraft after another circles over the previously peaceful town, dropping horrible death dealing shells into the modest homes. The air is filled with smoke and the frantic forms of the villagers are hardly discernible.

Furniture dragged from the houses is placed on either side of the fountain, forming a barricade. Now one house falls; then as it catches fire the flames extend to the next building. The girl Philippa, played by Anita Stewart, is in terror lest the house which holds the proofs to her rightful heritage—nobility—be destroyed before she can enter the wine-cellar and obtain the precious papers which are concealed in a safe. Toward the house she runs as though on wings, and it is only by the merest chance that she reaches it in time to claim what is rightfully hers.

At the Movies

Bend Theatre.

"A Child of the Paris Streets," the Triangle play that is coming to the Bend Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday, is featuring Mae Marsh and Robert Herron. It is set forth in the story that in order to be revenged on the Judge of the French court, who has sentenced her favorite son to the galleys, Mme. Dufrane, queen of the Paris Apaches, kidnaps the judge's little daughter, Julie. Julie is raised as an Apache, taught to steal and commit the other crimes peculiar to French gangsters. But her noble blood rebels against such nefarious work, and she tries to run away. She is caught, however, and threatened with death by strangulation unless she obeys the mandates of the band. Again she escapes and seeks shelter in the studio of a young American who is in the quarter Latin studying art. He falls in love with her and protects her. One day she ventures forth on the streets and is captured by the Apaches. But her old nurse has seen where she is taken and informs the judge, her father. The finish is thrilling in the extreme, and eminently satisfying.

Grand Theatre.

The bombardment scenes of "The Girl Philippa," the special eight-reel Vitagraph production from the novel by Robert W. Chambers, which was directed by S. Rankin Drew, starring America's daintiest actress, Anita Stewart, are remarkably vivid and realistic.

For the realism of this picture, which is the attraction at the Grand Theatre tonight, the Vitagraph company erected a French village in their immense open-air studio. Here cobble stones were laid for the street, skirted on either side by the rough

ORR, SEAMAN, VISITS FROM MARE ISLAND

Three White Suits, Two Blue Suits Is His Wardrobe—Sees Bend Uniformed Boys.

Clarence Orr, of La Pine, who entered Uncle Sam's service as an apprentice seaman from the Bend recruiting station, April 18, returned to Bend yesterday on a 10 days' leave of absence. He visited his yesterday and left for La Pine today.

Orr states that although he enlisted with his brother and two other La Pine boys, he became separated from them and is now in a company where there are no Central Oregon boys at all. He is stationed at Mare Island, however, and occasionally sees Steve Steidl and "Shorty" Clemens, of Bend, and William Hill and Paul Faucette, of La Pine.

Around the barracks at Mare Island, Orr has to wear his white uniform every day—and every day he must appear with it absolutely spotless. He has three white uniforms and has to wash two of them at least every other day. Two blue uniforms, complete his wardrobe.

Orr has washed dishes some, drilled some, and helped build some new barracks since he left Bend.

NEBRASKA RANCHERS WILL LOCATE HERE

After spending several days in the vicinity of Bend, four Nebraska ranchers, John M. Loewen, of Loman, and Herman Wolff, Samuel L. Keebler and Julius Krellwitz, of Langdon, have left for their homes in the east to make preparations to return with their livestock in the fall. They have located on homesteads in this section.
