

AN ARCTIC RESCUE

Tragedy of the Loss of the Karluk Off Wrangell Island.

PERILS OF THE SURVIVORS.

The Hardships and Sufferings They Braved and the Scene When the Rescue Ship From Alaska Was Sighted by the Camp on the Desolate Beach.

When the Karluk, the chief vessel of the Canadian arctic expedition which set out in June, 1913, became imprisoned by ice near Point Barrow, Alaska, Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the commander of the party, went ashore with five companions to hunt caribou. He never saw his ship again, for soon after he left her a furious northeast gale sprang up and carried her westward.

Near Wrangell Island, which lies north of Siberia, the ship succumbed to the tremendous pressure of the ice and sank. Eight of the Karluk's company were lost in trying to reach land, but seventeen survivors under Captain Bartlett succeeded in reaching Wrangell Island and on that uninhabited spot established a camp. From there Captain Bartlett, accompanied by one Eskimo, made the terribly difficult journey of eighty miles to the mainland of Siberia. He then went to Alaska and reported the fate of the Karluk.

Meanwhile Burt M. McConuell, the meteorologist of the expedition, who had left the Karluk with Stefansson, had made his way to Nome, Alaska. Here he joined Olaf Swenson, who had determined to go to the rescue in his little schooner King and Winge.

Almost eight months after the Karluk sank they sailed from Nome and, after encountering the usual difficulties of arctic navigation, successfully drew within sight of the cliffs and beach of Wrangell Island. Mr. McConuell tells the story of the rescue in Harper's Magazine:

The lookout in the crow's nest sighted a tent when we were within two miles of shore, and as we came nearer, under full speed, we could see a flag-pole and a cross.

Suddenly a man emerged from the tent on his hands and knees. He did not show any signs of joy. He did not wave his arms and shout when he sighted the ship. He merely rose and stood rigidly beside the tent, gazing at us as if dazed. More than once he brushed his hands across his eyes, as if he could not believe that the King and Winge was a real ship come to rescue him.

Our first fear was that the entire party, with the exception of the one man we saw, had perished, but that gloomy possibility was dispelled presently by the appearance of two other men. None of the trio made any demonstration. Aboard ship even the Eskimos were intensely excited.

The umiak was launched, and when it was within a hundred yards of the beach the man whom we had first seen started toward us, taking a rifle from its case. Our natives became greatly frightened. They pointed to their foreheads and muttered: "That man long time not much eat! Him crazy—all same fox!"

We landed on the beach and advanced toward this strange individual. His shaggy, matted hair streamed down over his eyes in wild disorder. His grimy face was streaked and furrowed with lines and wrinkles. I recognized him only by his voice when he spoke to Swenson. It was Munro.

"I don't know who you are, but I'm mighty glad to see you all," were his first words.

An instant later he recognized me and asked in astonishment, "How did you get here?"

Other questions were rapidly asked and answered, and then, "Have you a doctor aboard?" Munro demanded.

"You don't need a doctor," Swenson assured him. "What you need is a cook. We will go aboard and have breakfast."

Munro then came up, weak and emaciated. I did not recognize him until Munro spoke his name. He smiled in recognition, but was so visibly affected that I refrained from questioning him. Templeman next appeared. He was gaunt and very pale and seemed on the verge of a nervous breakdown. So we talked of general topics and asked no questions about their experiences.

At the Movies

Grand Theatre.

Movie fans remember Edith Storey of the Vitagraph company as the dashing cowgirl of former days. Recently this versatile star has played roles with drawing rooms for her background, and her public has almost forgotten how vivacious and real she used to be on the backs of frisky bronchos.

Once more, however, Miss Storey appears on the screen on horseback. In "Money Magic," the Blue Ribbon feature which Miss Storey journeyed to California to play in, and which is the attraction at the Grand Theatre,

EDITH STOREY, ANTONIO MORENO and WILLIAM DUNDAN in "MONEY MAGIC"

Thursday and Friday, her many friends once again catch her bounding over country roads on a frisky colt.

While she is by no means a cow-girl in this film nevertheless she proves that she has not forgotten how to ride, and Antonio Moreno, athlete that he is, finds it difficult to keep her pace in the riding scenes.

Although Miss Storey wears goggles to excellent advantage, she is far more contented performing some risky stunt than she could ever manage to be in a society tea room. That perhaps accounts for her glowing face and sparkling eyes in this feature production, for without any doubt she was glad to return to the Golden West even though it meant leaving her new home and her many, many friends in the eastern studios of the Vitagraph company.

NOTICE.

To whom it may concern: Notice is hereby given that the Gardner-Wilkinson Lumber Company, an Oregon corporation, has caused to be filed with the Corporation Commissioner of the State of Oregon, and with the County Clerk of Deschutes County, Oregon, supplemental articles of incorporation, having for their object the change of the name of said corporation to the Pine Tree Lumber Company.

This notice is published by authority of the Board of Directors of said corporation.

Dated this 21st day of June, 1917. PINE TREE LUMBER COMPANY, By A. J. Kroenert, President.

Aboard the schooner the rescued men had a sumptuous breakfast, but an hour afterward they were hungry again.

"Mr. Swenson, I want to ask a great favor of you," Munro finally gained courage to say. "For several months I have been dreaming of eating a whole can of condensed milk with a spoon."

Three cans were immediately brought forth, as both Maurer and Templeman confessed to a similar craving, and they ate that condensed milk as if it were ice cream.

At another camp forty miles away the King and Winge rescued nine other survivors. Three had died after reaching the island.

PHONE LINES READY TO WARN OF FIRES

Extra Precautions Being Taken by Forest Supervisor—Three Fires on Private Lands Checked.

With the coming of hot, dry weather and the consequent danger of forest fires, Forest Supervisor W. G. Hastings is bending every effort toward keeping the forestry telephone lines up to the highest pitch of efficiency. Yesterday afternoon he completed a personal survey of phone conditions and stated that with the exception of the West Deschutes line everything is in excellent running order. Extra precautions will be taken in the way of placing lookouts and fire finders.

Three small fires were reported last night from the forestry office, but all were under control today. None was on the national forest. One was a 30-acre fire on the Metolius, one was near the Tumalo bridge and one was on Spring river, near Harper. Campers' fires are thought to have caused all three.

TOBACCO PLACARDS MUST BE REMOVED

Unacquainted with the city regulations regarding the displaying of advertising matter, R. G. Bradley, traveling salesman for the American Tobacco Co., of California, was arrested this morning by acting police officer Earl Houston, and was hauled before Municipal Judge H. C. Ellis, charged with posting notices on city property and on buildings facing city streets and alleys.

Bradley entered a plea of guilty and agreed to take down immediately all the signs he had put up, some 40 in number. The case was continued until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning at which time the complaint will be withdrawn if the agreement has been lived up to.
