SAGES ENTERTAIN AT SCHOOL ASSEMBLY

Comic Paper Read By Members of the Club, Makes Hit With Students.
Musical numbers and a comic paper entitled the "Sage Bulletin," made up the program given yesterday afternoon in the high school auditorium by the Sage literary society. This was the first appearance the club has made this year in a regular assembly hour.
Stanley Bond and Merle Miller made a hit in the uniform of two soldiers just returned from the trenches, who produced the newspaper from their home town and read aloud jokes and humorous stories concerning people in the high school.
Mildred Morris and Ruth Fleming gave a pleasing piano duet. This was followed by vocal solos by Viola Brown and Marion Coyner. Selections on the new Victrola opened the assembly.

A Caddy Story.
The gentleman was learning to play golf and it had been too much for the composure of his caddy. The caddy had made valiant efforts at first, but by the third hole he was helpless with mirth. The gentleman fixed him with a cold eye and said:
"What do you think I'll give you on your card if you are so silly and giggle all the time? Do you think you'll get a 'No'?"
"No," replied the chortling caddy. "I'll get a V. G."
"V. G.!" I suppose that stands for very good," snapped the infuriated gentleman.
"No, sir, V. G., very giggly," said the abandoned little caddy, rolling on the ground.

Will Not Visit "Meat Houses."
In Tokyo, says Good Health, a certain class of Japanese are adopting the practice of eating meat, as they have acquired the habit of using tobacco and drinking whisky, through their desire to imitate the westerners. Some have an idea that by flesh-eating they may be able to increase their size and vigor.
It is noticeable, however, that the Japanese women refuse to eat meat and will not visit the restaurants where meat is served, which are known as "meat houses." The Japanese women regard it improper to visit such places.

St. Paul's Gold Cross a Mark.
There is a feeling growing in city circles that steps should be taken to denude the gleam of the cross and bell on St. Paul's cathedral, says the London Globe. It is pointed out that these were regilded shortly before the war, and that when the sun is shining brightly they afford a magnificent landmark for enemy airmen to indicate the whereabouts of the very center of the city of London.
It is stated that the shining cross can be seen many miles away with the naked eye.

AT THE MOVIES

Grand Theatre.
Senator Frank Deering (William Farnum), long has fought the good old fight to aid children in their misery, his misery entailed by child labor. His dearest friend is Judge Vernon (Frank Clark) who, apparently, has been his able lieutenant in the good fight.
Earlier in life, Judge Vernon had married and been blessed with a charming daughter, Grace, (Vivian Rich).
Coming in daily contact with this splendid representative of the other sex, Senator Deering, who is a bachelor, is constantly reminded of the softer but greater joys of life which he has missed.
He begins by feeling toward the girl the tenderness that a father has for his daughter. Time brings him the discovery that he really loves the girl, loves her so that he would make her his wife.
But youth intervenes. A Dr. Kendle (Brooklyn Keller), appears on the scene; and by his tenderness and love for little children, he finds his way to the heart of Grace. Senator Deering discovers that the young doctor has won the affections of Grace, and he manfully stands aside. Meanwhile the fight against child labor goes on--and the picture at the Grand Theatre develops a very interesting theme.

Henry McCarthy (Charles Clary), is of the old type of politician and dollar-maker; he wrings the dollars from his employees and he pays liberal graft to the officials so that he may continue in his hard-fisted ways. But underneath, deep down in his soul, is a little spark of tenderness. And this little spark is kept alive by Grace, for at her feet McCarthy would lay his heart.

Liberty Theatre.
A special treat to the patrons of the Liberty Theatre is promised for Sunday and Monday in the way of another rip-roaring comedy cinema presenting the inevitable Douglas Fairbanks in his newest and funniest offering, "Down to Earth," released by Arteract Pictures. In this film the energetic Douglas not only excels all his previous efforts on the screen but at the same time, proves his ability as an author, in which respect he is just as distinctive as his acting. In fact, this photoplay is "very much Fairbanks," so to speak, for he wrote it, enacted its principal character and even directed several scenes himself when other duties in connection with the production of the film called Director John Emerson away.
In addition to its other merits, "Down to Earth" is undoubtedly the most lavishly staged photoplay in which the popular Fairbanks has ever appeared. The film shows the many different localities visited by a happy young man whose "wanderlust" and "close-to-nature" ideas not only afford him the real pleasures of life but at the same time are the means of spreading health and sunshine wherever he goes. The theme is typical of the true Fairbanks nature and in addition to its mirth-provoking qualities carries with it the well-known optimism and philosophy of the famous screen star, proving in all one of the greatest screen tonics ever presented. Douglas Fairbanks knows himself better than any person living. In writing the story for his own characterization it is, therefore, naturally to be supposed that he gives himself the best vehicle to express his own ideas on life.
