CHICKENS FOR EMPTY CANS

Trading of Discarded Tins and Bottles for Food is Common in Thibet, Explorer Reports.

Bringing with him an extensive collection of small mammals, reptiles and birds, Roy C. Andrews, head of the Asiatic zoological expedition, has arrived in New York, after a year and a half in the remote provinces of China.

The expedition spent much of the time in the mountains of Yunnan and progressed as far as Thibet. Mr. Andrews' adventures included everything from hunting "blue" tigers to buying chickens at the rate of two for one empty condensed milk can.

Politically China is in a chaotic state. Mr. Andrews reports, as most of the provinces are so far removed from the central government at Peking that any change of authority does not make itself felt. Socially, he declares, it is overrun with bandits, most of whom are recruits from the army. According to Mr. Andrews, there is no great moral difference between a Chinese common soldier and a bandit.

In many places he found traffic by water impossible because the army has a habit of using small river boats for target practice.

"The expedition found the border of Thibet an ideal place to live in. Food may be bought with old bottles and cans. There are plenty of servants and no rumor of the war has penetrated that far."

Now behold the student coming up the street! He is clad in rubber and shining black. He is thin of shank as becomes a scholar. He sags with knowledge. He hungers for wisdom. He comes opposite the book shop. It is but coquetry that his eyes seek the window of the tobacconist. His heart, you may be sure, looks through the buttons at his back.

At last he turns, Charles S. Brooks writes in Yale Review. He pauses on the curb. Now desire has clutched him. He jingles his trousered shillings. He trends the gutter. He squints upon the rack. He lights upon a treasure. He plucks it forth. He is irresolute whether to buy it or to spend the extra shilling on his dinner. Now all you cooks together, to save your business rattle your pans to rouse him! If within these ancient buildings there are onions ready peeled—quick!—throw them in the skillet that the whiff may come beneath his nose! Chance trembles and casts its vote—eerie meente—down goes the shilling—he has bought the book. Tonight he will spread it beneath his candle. Foot

18-Cylinder Engine.

By leaps and bounds the stationary type airplane engines are increasing in power rating in the stern competition between the central powers and the allied nations. In England Louis Contalen has been doing commendable work along these lines, and among his latest products is the 18-cylinder Sunbeam-Catalan engine, which develops 475 brake horse power, and has no fewer than half a dozen magnetos and an equal number of carburetors, says the Scientific American. The arrangement of the cylinders is interesting: Twelve of the cylinders are arranged as in the usual twin-six practice, while the remaining six are arranged in the upper center, forming what is styled the "broad arrow" type.

AT THE MOVIES

Liberty Theatre.

The mere announcement that Sarah Bernhardt in the moving picture, "Mothers of France," will be seen at the Liberty Theatre tonight and Sunday matinee, is sufficient to arouse intense interest as this is probably the last picture in which the divine Sarah will appear and as it shows the French trenches, French battlefields and French cities in wartime. When exhibited in France and England this picture took those countries by storm. It was the biggest motion picture success ever presented in those countries and it seems certain that this tremendous success will be repeated on this side of the Atlantic. Certainly, no picture ever produced has such a combination of interest and entertainment. In the first place the star alone would lift any picture into the extraordinary class. To this is added the timeliness of the production, the magnificence upon which it has been staged, the intense interest of the plot and the wonderful war pictures filmed under the auspices of the French government in French trenches and on French battlefields. Some of the scenes are memorable. For instance, one scene shows Madame Bernhardt in front of the statue of Joan d'Arc before the Cathedral at Rheims. The havoc wrought in the Cathedral by German shells is plainly evident in this scene. You will never see the like of this attraction. It is so out of the ordinary, so wonderfully interesting and entertaining, so splendidly photographed and so tremendously acted by Sarah Bernhardt, that it is in an unapproachable class by itself. Do not miss seeing it. It is presented by the World Film Corporation.

Theda Bara, who will soon be seen in a sensational film version of "Camille," the newest William Fox super picture, plaintively asks, "How would you like to be called a Love Pirate, the Ishmaelite of Femininity, a Vampire, the woman with the most beautifully wicked face in the world?"

"Vampirism, such as I do, is the hardest kind of work," says Miss Bara. "I am imbued with the character and lose myself in it. Complete exhaustion follows my day of work. When my name was first displayed on the billboards, the American public did not know who or what was being advertised. Now, when they see my name they invariably say,

"People asked what manner of woman I could be who portrayed in such lifelike manner the sirens of the drama." In the super-picture, "Camille," Theda Bara plays the part of the woman she has just described. This Fox special is at the Grand Sunday evening and Monday.

Bluebird will provide the entertainment at the Grand Theatre tonight and Sunday afternoon, when Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon will appear in "A Stormy Knight," a mystery comedy of original theme and deftly entertaining consummation. When their parents decreed that they should wed, the girl in the case decided that she must assure herself that her future husband was, above all things, courageous. She wanted to marry "a regular man" and to prove to her own satisfaction that she was betting the "real article," Mary Weller led Jack Winton through a series of adventures that would make most men quit at the first encounter. Franklyn Farnum, as Jack Weller, sees it through, and wins the girl of his
