AT THE MOVIES

Grand Theatre.

From an outlaw with a price on his head, to a 100 per cent citizen, is the character portrayed by Dustin Farnum, famous star of stage and screen, in the latest William Fox photoplay, "Durand of the Bad Lands," to be at the Grand Theatre Thursday and Friday. In this screen drama, Mr. Farnum shows all the virile energy for which he is so well known. His portrayal of the bad side of Dick Durand's character is the best he has done and he shows the man's softer, nobler instincts with that care-free, rollicking, laughing disposition that has made him a favorite wherever he has appeared.

He saves three kids from Indians who massacre everyone else in the little settlement. He is blamed for the killings, is caught, tried and convicted. But the governor, whose daughter he has saved, pardons him. Long before he had fallen in love and the girl's fondness for him turns him into an A-No. 1 man. Mr. Farnum's boyhood life on a farm comes in handy to him in this picture—milking cows particularly.

Liberty Theatre.

Many of the queer habits and mannerisms of the Arab people of a little colony in Asia are shown in Mme. Petrova's latest Paramount picture, "Exile"; native teachers or tutors sitting cross-legged on the ground as they study queer books of parchment paper; beggar children in the streets; and the custom of clapping the hands three times to summon servants.

Madame Petrova herself, being a noted traveller was able to supply many of the little "atmospheric" touches necessary and with the marvelous directing of Maurice Tourneur, the production breathes the very spirit of Asia.

"Exile" will be shown at the Liberty Theatre on Thursday and Friday.

Never before the filming of "The Manx-Man," the photo-drama founded on Hall Caine's book of the same name, which will be produced at the Liberty Theatre beginning Tuesday of next week, have the inhabitants of the locality where a picture was being taken shown such intense and lively interest in proceedings.

The whole picture was taken on the Isle of Man, and because Hall Caine is the idol of the dwellers there—or because they regard him as having done more for the island in his novels than any half-dozen governors, they just naturally lent every possible collaboration, when they were apprised that he was interested in the work of the camera men and their directors. Even the English Home Office and the British Board of Admiralty co-operated and permitted the camera to be used within three miles of the sea coast, such use being otherwise restricted during the period of the war.

The newspapers urged the people to make the film a success, and they all put themselves into the hands of George Loane Tucker, who directed the picture taking, unrestrictedly. When it became necessary to stage a representation of the famous Tynwald Court ceremony, the men gathered on Tynwald Hill to the number of eleven thousand.

Farmers came from the fields, fishermen from their boats to appear in this stirring scene of "The Manx-

Man." Every accessory to the ceremonial was provided by the governor's instructions, from the famous chair of state to the old sword of state that has been carried every year to Tynwald Hill for centuries.

And when the governor, Lord Raglan, was not quite satisfied with the costume worn by the actor playing the part of the governor in the film, he insisted on sending for his own uniform and giving it to the artist to wear. Could a producer hope for more authentic costuming than that.

ONE MUTE STORY OF THE WAR

Sunny Nieupont on the Yser, a Little City of 4,000, Among Others Wiped Out of Existence.

Nieupont lies upon the Yser, the tidal stream that stopped the German rush for Calais, writes William Townsend Porter in the Atlantic Monthly. That June before the world went mad, the peaceful town drowned in the sun—the pearly Belgian sun that painters love. The men went down to the sea in their fishing boats, or worked their fields; old women, their lace upon their knees, sat in a patch of shade before the door and plied their bobbins; children, with shrill sweet voices, darted about like birds; the creaking wain went to and fro plied high with the harvest.

Four thousand simple folk! Not one remains. Their houses, too, are gone. Their ancient church, their historic tower, are mounds of ruin. And still the hissing shells, hour by hour, day by day, tear down the crumbling walls, adding fresh ruin to a scene most desolate.

The people of the sun are gone. Another race inhabits there. They live in holes beneath the ground. They come not forth except to kill.

The Toll France Has Paid.

Four-fifths of the women in France wear mourning, say the correspondents, and we believe them, but we are not among those who credit reports of a France "exhausted" and "bied white," observes a war writer. French women go into mourning on the smallest provocation. Rye shops abound. Every little way in a French city one encounters the sign, "Mourning in 24 hours." When Madame puts on black, no one straightway infers the demise of monsieur. Much more likely an uncle by marriage had dropped off, or perhaps some eighth cousin thrice removed. It is always possible that, for one wooden cross on a battlefield, there will be six dozen gowns at the dye shop. No one denies that the French army has suffered terrible casualties. No one feels inclined to underestimate them, the French least of all. But only Americans who have never lived in France will imagine that the swarms of black-clad women indicate a proportionate number of dead Pollus. The truth is, Pollus were never so plucky as today, never so efficient, and, despite heartbreaking losses, never so numerous.

Some Inducement.

Christopher Brown walked into the local recruiting station of the United States marine corps at Philadelphia, says the Troy Times, and after announcing that he was from Braintree, said he wanted to enlist. "The idea of enlisting is a good one," said the recruiting sergeant, "but what is Braintree—a breakfast food or an educational institution?" "It is a town in Massachusetts—the only town in the United States that ever produced two presidents," proudly replied Brown. "John Adams was born there, and so was John Quincy Adams. John Hancock was born there, too, as was Col. Charles G. Long, chief of staff of the marine corps. If you take me into the marine corps I may be running the thing in a year or two."
