company, promised that the material for the fire house would be available in May.

A unanimous vote was taken for the appointment of a poundmaster, to be given police authority. On the request of Chief of Police Nixon, an allowance of $40 a month was made him for the upkeep of a car. The amount is only $8 more than has been paid for the use of a saddle horse, and Mr. Nixon assured the council that the increase in the number of law violators who could be apprehended would make up nearly the entire amount of the allowance.

Health Ordinance Passes.

Mayor Eastes officially announced his veto of the pool room ordinance, but due to the absence of Councilman McPherson, a second vote was postponed. A bill for an ordinance to give the health committee power to declare open toilets and buildings in which horses or cattle are kept to be a nuisance, and fixing a penalty for failure to abate such nuisance, was passed under an emergency clause.

Fire Chief Tom Carlon explained the need for a law to prevent parking at blind crossings, and the necessity for keeping curbs near fire hydrants clear, and City Attorney Benson was instructed to draw up an ordinance covering these points.

To economize on rent, the council ordered that on the first of April police headquarters be moved to the city rest rooms.

A resolution for estimates and specifications for street improvements, already announced, was passed without question.

"Your committee begs to suggest that the three councilmen receiving the lowest votes be retired at the end of two years and that the three councilmen receiving the highest votes retain their office for four years, thus you will have three experienced councilmen as hold-overs at each election.

"But we find that this change will have to be made by the vote of the people, therein entailing, in our judgment, a special election fitting this case and complying with the state laws.

"Relative to the rules of business, your committee would suggest that an established rule be inaugurated that the business of the council be transacted in the chamber rooms of the council and not at the Pilot Butte Inn.

"Under the head of order, your committee believes it entirely out of order that the council be subjected to the domination of any organiza-
