SPARE BULB FOR HEADLIGHTS

Splendid Plan to Mount Socket in Position Shown in Illustration—Light Is Handy.

Every driver of an electrically-lighted automobile should carry somewhere in the car a spare headlight bulb, as these may blow out at any time. Instead of carrying the spare bulb in a box under the seat, it is a good idea to mount a socket in the position shown, connecting it through a simple switch to the storage battery, says Popular Science. The spare bulb thus forms a very convenient light for illuminating the engine, and the socket may be found handy for attaching a trouble light.

He resided in the suburbs, and when he accidentally met an old friend in the city who persuaded him to remain in town for the evening he went to the telegraph office and wired his wife as follows:

"Missed the 5:30 train. Don't keep dinner waiting. Shall be home late."

It was very, very late when he did arrive home, and his wife met him at the door.

"Did you get my message?" he said, beaming down at her.

"Yes," she said, very quietly, "but I would like you to explain why you sent a message at 4:28 telling me you had missed the 5:30 train?"

Pacific Blockade.

"Pacific blockade" is a term invented by Hautefeuille, the French writer on international maritime law, to describe a blockade exercised by a great power for the purpose of bringing pressure to bear on a weaker state without actual war. The Pacific blockade has apparently established itself as a legitimate means of coercing a weak power to observe its international obligations without resorting to war for that purpose. It is a modern development and has usually been the act of several powers acting in concert. It was first employed in 1827, when the combined fleets of Great Britain, France and Russia blockaded a portion of the Turkish coast. More recent instances of its exercise were the blockade of Crete by the powers in 1897, the blockade of Venezuelan ports by Great Britain, Germany and Italy in 1902 and of Turkish ports by the powers in 1905.

"American soldiers in London," said Gen. Samuel A. Ansell, "take a great deal of interest in the barges who row enormous canal boats up and down the Thames.

"A soldier stood on the Blackfriars bridge one day watching a barge row his canal boat, or barge. It was an enormous barge; half a dozen oarsmen could hardly have managed it, but the lone bargee wielded his oar undismayed, and the barge approached the soldier on the bridge at the rate of about an inch a minute.

"The soldier watched the barge a long time, and, when the barge was at last reached, he took the cigarette from his mouth and shouted down to the plucky oarsman:

"Well, so long, old timer! Don't forget to bring us a parrot back with you."
