THAT LIST OF NAMES.

From various quarters come reports to The Bulletin that many of the people who signed the Johnson recall petition are aggrieved because their names were published in the paper last week. In fact, so much has been said that we feel it proper to refer to the matter here.

In the first place it should be understood that the names were published in the paper strictly as a matter of news. That is what a newspaper is always seeking—news, and that list of names was an extremely interesting piece of news, as is indicated by the great number who have said that they "read every name."

Some suggest that the list was published by us in malice, because we expected that to make it public would cause trouble for those whose names were included. That is not so, nor did the publication mean trouble that would not have come had the list not been published. The recall petition, duly filed in the office of the clerk of the school board, was a matter of public record, open to the inspection of anyone, and available to any who wished "to make trouble" for those whose names were on it.

However, that is not the important thing which has been brought out by the publication of the list. The important thing is the fact that a large number of those who signed the petition are now explaining why they did so, and the explanation in every case amounts to this: that they did not know just what they were signing. Some say that they were misled. Others signed "to please someone." And it is these people who, seeing their names in print as desirous of recalling Mr. Johnson, feel aggrieved because, as a matter of fact, they did not sign with that desire.

Let us repeat that the list was published as news, and for no other purpose. The publication has brought out again, however, the fact that people sign petitions when they really have no interest in them and when they do not know what they are signing. If they really meant what their signatures indicated they could not object to the publication of their names; if they did not mean it they should not have signed.

ATTEND THE BUDGET MEETING.

Tonight, according to present plans, the city council will consider the budget for next year. Before it is put in final shape we suppose that taxpayers will be invited to meet with the council to discuss its items, but it would be desirable for all interested citizens to attend tonight's meeting for the purpose of giving such assistance as they can in this very important work.

People who are interested in the library should be present to urge a sufficient appropriation for that purpose. Those who feel that the fire department should have more to spend; those who want a larger fund for police or health work; those who are interested in any phase of the work of the city should attend.

Nor should the attendance be confined to those who want larger appropriations. If any think there may be a tendency toward excessive expenditure it is equally their duty to be present.

The meeting is important. Good citizens will attend it.
