GRAND.

Tonight will be the last showing of Sessue Hayakawa in "The Bond of Honor," a strong two-role part played by the eminent Japanese film actor.

For tomorrow matinee and evening and Sunday matinee the Grand will show Viola Dana in "The Gold Cure" and the last episode of "The Lure of the Circus," featuring Eddie Polo.

A delightful and mirth provoking romantic comedy, is "The Gold Cure," with Viola Dana appearing in the leading role. This is the latest of Miss Dana's screen offerings and proved most satisfactory to a large and appreciative audience.

Annie, the heroine of the play, finds a town where all the young men have gone to war a most dismal place to live in and decides that it is her duty to import some new ones for the amusement of herself and friends. Her method of accomplishing this is unique, to say the least of it, but she eventually gains her ends and no less than two handsome and charming young men from a nearby city are compelled, by her strategy, to remain in the town for an indefinite period—long enough for Cupid to get busy.

John Barrymore, the talented Paramount star, will be seen in one of the most humorous roles of his screen career in "Here Comes the Bride," which will be displayed at the Liberty theater tonight and Saturday.

In "Here Comes the Bride," Mr. Barrymore has the part of a poor struggling lawyer who is induced to wed a strange widow for a bribe of $100,000, despite the fact that he loves the beautiful daughter of a corn magnate. She loves him, but the father is opposed to the match. This unfortunate marriage provokes numerous interesting as well as humorous situations, in all of which the artistry of Mr. Barrymore is finely displayed.

The Mack Sennett comedy, "The Village Smithy," on the same bill, is worthy of special mention as one of the best of this fun maker has ever made. An Outing magazine travel reel, "Glimping the Gondolas," containing beautiful views of famous Venice, completes a very interesting bill.

HOW HE EARNED HIS CROSS

American Soldier of Chinese Parentage Talks Modestly of Deed of Great Bravery.

Corporal Sing Kee, color sergeant of the Three Hundred and Sixth Infantry of the Seventy-seventh division, holds, one may fairly believe, the distinction of being the only American soldier of Chinese descent who ever won a Croix de Guerre in France. The corporal is a modest warrior, not loquacious in the tongue of his fellow soldiers; and when asked by a reporter to tell how he won his cross he replied, "What did I do? I did, that's all." Others, however, are more explicit, and what Corporal Sing Kee really did was to carry messages through gas and shell fire. He was one of the twenty runners between commanders of advanced battalions at Mont Notre Dame, and at the end of the second day the corporal was the only one still remaining in action. Late in the afternoon he was gassed by the enemy, but managed to reach his destination. After that came the Croix de Guerre, honorably earned by the American soldier of Chinese parentage who just "did, that's all."—Christian Science Monitor.

Writes Treaty by Hand.

News dispatches from Paris reported the old tradition that treaties shall be written by hand survives, and that Joseph Carlo of the French ministry of foreign affairs, official calligraphist and painter, wrote the new peace treaty.

For 40 years the post of official illuminator in the French ministry of foreign affairs was held by M. Garapin, according to the Detroit News. He had one love in life—"the pen," to quote his own words, "this simple and marvelous instrument through which human thought is transcribed and forever preserved." One hate—"the vulgar and unsanctified typewriter, which prints without art pages that time will not respect."
