A Paramount Picture

At the Liberty Friday and Saturday.

for Eye." In the movie world Nazimova occupies a peculiar position, like Theda Bara, Bill Hart and other stars who are particularly adapted to certain types of films. "Eye for Eye" is a play different. It is an adaptation from one of the greatest stage plays. Nazimova alone, in this picture, is worth seeing in her startling role.

Then Sunday and Monday comes one of the biggest productions of the year, "The Unpardonable Sin," written by Major Rupert Hughes, directed by Marshall Neilan and starred by Blanch Sweet. This picture opened in New York at the Broadway theater. It was the talk of the entire metropolis. It is startling.

LIBERTY.

Lila Lee in "Such a Little Pirate" is the gentle little lass with a sea captain grandfather who spins wild yarns of buccaneer days. That is what she is at the opening of the story, but before the end she is a regular little pirate, hunting hidden treasures at the head of a gang that would freeze your heart in your mouth. In this picture Miss Lee is a very dynamic personality. She will be seen at the Liberty theater Friday, Saturday and Saturday matinee.
