MATTERS THAT ARE APART

Wooer Discovered That Business Methods and Lovemaking Are Things That Will Not Mix.

There was no sentiment about the young man. His had been a business training, and he carried business methods into his social life.

"Will you be my wife?" he asked, bluntly.

The girl looked startled.

"I'm not much of a lover," he added, "but I guess I'll make a pretty good husband. I might give you a whole lot of soft talk, but what's the use? Marriage is a contract and should be settled on a business basis. When I want anything in business I go after it bluntly. I generally know what I want, too, and I want you."

She gasped, but presently regained her composure.

"Fortunately," she said, "I've had a little business training myself, so we can discuss this proposed contract properly and dispassionately."

"I'm glad to find you so sensible," he told her.

"I can give you nothing better than a second option," she said.

"What?" he exclaimed.

"I might tell you that I am conscious of the honor you do me, but that I am already engaged," she explained.

"That, with a suggestion that it is very sudden, would be the sentimental way, but I will merely say that the first option is already taken."

"Then there is no hope?"

"How foolish," she commented. "As a business man you ought to know that a first option does not necessarily mean a closed contract. If you don't want to take a chance on a second option, say so; if you do, I'll drop you a line if I find myself on the matrimonial market again."

"That's sort of cold-blooded," he complained.

"That's business," she asserted.

"I don't believe I like business as well as I thought I did," he remarked.

"Very likely," she returned.

"I'd rather have a first option."

"A first option never has been and never will be secured by business methods."—Brooklyn Eagle.

STAND ON SITE OF TRAGEDY

Ancient Willow Trees Believed to Be Near Scene of the Deportation of the Acadians.

Whoever has read Longfellow's poem, "Evangeline," will be interested in visiting the land of Evangeline, the Annapolis valley in Nova Scotia, Canada and the country about Wolfville, which is the center. Grand Pre, the little village which was the scene of the deportation of the Acadians in 1755, is only a short distance from Wolfville, but little is left of the village where the tragedy, told of by the poet was enacted. The chief object of interest in what was once Grand Pre, are the mammoth, gnarled ancient willow trees, known as Evangeline's willows, which stand, a conspicuous group, amid the fertile green meadows and serve as a windbreak. They show their age, these ancient trees, and were undoubtedly planted by the French Canadians; for the Acadians invariably planted willows wherever they settled, and these trees are perpetual memorials of them. Beside the willows, there may be seen at the site of Grand Pre the old well, portions of the foundations of the church of St. Charles, and some stones that mark the site of the priest's house. These willow trees are always visited by tourists, and although history does not exactly tally with the poet's account of the deportations of the Acadians, and though there may be a division of opinion as to the justice of the act by the English in the deportation of the Acadians, the old willows tell no tales, but stand, sturdy and strong, and are rightly landmarks still hale and vigorous.

Poetical Inspiration.

It is not about great events that great novels are written. The same is true of great poems. Not "the 15 decisive battles of the world," but such relatively unimportant ones as Balaklava, Ivry, Hohenlinden and Blenheim have inspired the poets. Waterloo was considered to be the greatest battle of modern times, but the lines Byron inserted in "Childe Harold" constitute the only memorable poem ever written about it. The only ballad of the Civil war, which became fixed forever in people's minds, related to no great battle but to Stonewall Jackson's march through the little town of Frederick.

The great events are peaks in the mountain ranges of time, that leave little to the imagination. Literature thrives by the streams of legend and glory that run down from them and by the lanes and roads of emotion, aspiration, passion and endeavor that lead up to them. The side lights and side issues and everyday events make literature, as they make life itself.

Insects in Amber.

The proverbial "fly in amber" is strikingly exemplified in a collection of red amber from Burma recently presented to the British museum by R. C. J. Swinhoe, of Mandalay. The amber is unusually rich in insects, including, according to Prof. T. D. A. Cockerell, who has examined the material, 31 new species, of which five are types of new genera. Most of these are found in a block of amber rather larger than a man's fist. This has been cut into slices about half an inch thick. Nearly every large order of insect is represented with the exception of ants.—Scientific American.

HOW HAILSTONES ARE FORMED

According to Theory, Electrical Action Is Responsible for Storms That Frequently Do Damage.

The formation of hail through electrical action, according to one theory, is an interesting and even wonderful process. The wind draws out a cloud into a long, narrow strip. In that form, owing to the great amount of surface exposed to the air, the cloud evaporates rapidly, producing intense cold.

Dry particles of snow are then formed, and these, by friction with the water drops, quickly become charged with negative electricity. But the water drops carry positive electricity, and since negative attracts positive a film of water is formed upon each snow particle and is instantly frozen into a layer of thin ice.

At this thickness its outer surface remains moist, the water not freezing so rapidly there, whereupon the electrical charge changes from negative to positive and the particle is repelled by the water drops and driven to the outer parts of the cloud. Here the increased cold covers it with snow, and friction charges it anew with negative electricity.

Repulsion is now once more changed for attraction, and the particle rushes back into the cloud, receiving upon its surface another film of water, which is turned into a second ice layer.

Thus the growing hailstone darts zig-zag through the cloud, piling up its alternate layers of snow and ice, until gravitation gains control and sends it with a jingling crowd of its fellows spinning to the ground.

Dust Is Very Dangerous.

All kinds of dust form dangers to human beings. Not only does dust exercise a direct harmful influence on the tissues of the organism, but it is the chief transporting agent of germs of infection and contagion.

Dust is composed of infinitesimal particles of street mud and of refuse of every description which lies on the surface of the soil.

Bacteriologists say that these particles, when dry, are disseminated in the atmosphere, together with all the impurities and microbes which they may contain, and to which they serve as transporting agents.

GRAND.

"The Eternal Magdalene," to be seen for the last time tonight at the Grand theater, is a strong production with strong characters featuring the major roles. The story is an old one, but it is put up in a new light and worthy of serious reflection. With this feature is being shown Billy Parsons in "Bill's Opportunity."

Tomorrow and Wednesday evenings Mary McLaren will be seen in a fascinating drama, "An Amazing Wife," together with a Vitagraph comedy, "Chubs and Chops."

LIBERTY.

A large audience was more than pleased at the Mary Pickford production, "Captain Kidd, Jr." Mary is at her very best in one of these mischievous productions. As an emulator of the mythical Captain Kidd Mary is good. This feature will be shown again tonight for the last time. In addition the Liberty offers Pictograph, cartoon comedy, News Weekly and Literary Digest pungent topics.

Tomorrow and Wednesday Antonio Moreno will be featured in Rudyard Kipling's play of India, a marvelous production of this character, "Naulahka," together with a James Montgomery Flagg comedy, "The Last Bottle."

Atrocious, Indeed.

One of the most famous—as well as one of the worst—puns of history was perpetrated by King James I of England, when Sir Walter Raleigh, whom for political reasons he disliked, was presented to him. Said the king, fixing Raleigh with his cold-enough eye, "Rawly! Rawly! True enough, for I think of thee very Rawly, mon!"

Long Sentences.
In "Les Miserables" Victor Hugo has one sentence of a hundred lines, and earlier in the book, in one of the chapters descriptive of Waterloo, there are over 50 lines without a full stop. England's record is held by the foreign enrollment act, one section of which reaches its six hundredth word.

Our charge accounts are not expensive things

Not even to us. Certainly not to our customers.

Of course, once in a blue moon someone forgets to pay a bill and moves to Montana—but accidents will happen.

We don't think of charging these slight losses to our other customers any more than if our delivery wagon broke down we'd charge them for the repairs.

And compared to our customers' convenience and their appreciation of this service of ours the so-called "cost" of carrying credit accounts is nothing at all. Prove it for yourself.
