A LANDING FIELD.

Some weeks ago we jokingly suggested that no sooner did we get a public camp ground than the necessity developed for an airplane landing field. In the short time that has elapsed the matter has passed from the humorous to the serious and now Bend is faced with the necessity of providing such a field if it wishes to see exhibitions of the modern art of flying, or to prepare for the commercial airplane business that is bound to come.

When we say that "Bend" must do this we are uncertain whether the job is one for the Commercial club, the city council or citizens who may organize for the purpose. Last year the Commercial club was ready to help the government obtain a field here, but that was in the expectation that a training station would be established which would bring business to town. While we all would like to see some flying it is doubtful if the Commercial club would go very far toward procuring a field just for exhibition purposes, any more than it makes arrangements for circus grounds.

In Portland, we understand, a field has been provided by the city council, but whether for the reasons that lead to the establishment of municipal docks or the maintenance of municipal golf links, we do not know. Taxpayers who for a time might be willing to pay for a landing field as a means of gratifying their interest in a new thing would soon object when the commercial aspect came to the fore and the field became merely a business terminal. And yet such field would seem to be more like a municipal dock, available to all the freighters who came in, than a railroad terminal which could be used only by arrangement with the owner. This in turn suggests that provision of a field would be a proper municipal function.

Private individuals might see something in it to maintain a field just as garages are maintained. In time there will probably be companies with chains of fields in the towns between which they operate their airplanes. They will have gas and oil storage and freight sheds with delivery cars to take passengers and express from the field to their destinations. If this is the case, there will be no need for municipal fields unless as a means of regulating rates.

But this is dreaming. The question before the house is whether Bend will provide a landing field to be used now for exhibition flights, and later, undoubtedly, for commercial business.

Who knows the answer?

Famous Name in Boston.

Three Josiah Quincys have filled the office of mayor of Boston. The first Josiah Quincy to become mayor served six years, from 1823 to 1829, later becoming president of Harvard college. His son, Josiah Quincy, Jr., was mayor for three years, from 1846 to 1848, and he was the grandfather of the Josiah Quincy who was mayor for four years, from 1896 to 1899.

Use for Electric Fan in Closet.

An electric fan has not fulfilled all its obligations when it has cooled your house. Set it revolving in a dark, airless closet; it will bring in its wake ventilation, if the door is left open during the process. In addition it will dispossess the moths.

The Hindus and the Lotus.

The Hindus compare India to the lotus, the petals representing Central India and the surrounding leaves the divisions of the country. The design is much used in eastern temples and architecture generally, and the plant is cultivated in public gardens. A pond in the Taj gardens at Agra holds pure lotus blossoms.

A movement is on foot for division of the Bend school district. The northwest part of the district—the Wimer-Edwards settlement—is too far from Bend to get any benefit from the school.

Fruit appears to take kindly to the soil and climate of the Columbia Southern segregation west of the Swalley bridge. At the Becker place, vegetables are first class, and there are also 50 fruit trees planted last spring that have made remarkable growth. Mr. Becker proposes to set two acres in strawberries this fall.

Two weeks ago money order service was begun at the Bend post-office. Last week telephone communication between Bend and the outside world was inaugurated. This week the first deposits were received by the new Bend bank. And so it goes.

LIKE THE BOOK OF GENESIS

Description of Flood of Time of Noah Found Among Ancient Records of Chaldea.

Perhaps the tracing of the story of the book of Genesis is the true fascination that Mesopotamia has for those who have time to read. The great boats of the Euphrates have the identical lines of the toy ark that can be bought in London. Where a pent roof has been added for our purposes the two are one in shape. A Euphrates "bellum" arranged as a sick barge is the toy ark of childhood. Is that toy ark an authentic tradition in its shape? It is almost certain to be. The Euphrates boats are pitched inside and out with pitch, as was that ark. In these same bellums, some as large as 70 tons, we may find British batteries sailing the Euphrates and a modified menagerie could easily walk on board. One suggestion of the toy shop tradition strikes the casual observer. The tribespeople from the hills who work on the Tigris and Euphrates wear high black felt hats, a topper without a brim. Are Mr. and Mrs. Noah really correctly dressed?

Then on top of the discovery of the ark comes the more serious reading of a parallel version of the Bible story of the flood found in the cuneiform in Layard's tablets from the Royal library of Ashurbanipal at Nineveh, copied or collected possibly from Sargon's library at Accade or Erech, older than Ashurbanipal by perhaps 1,800 years. Were the stories of Genesis the household stories of Chaldea 4,000 years ago? It would seem so, when from Babylon is unearthed a seal with the representation of the temptation, Adam and Eve, the serpent and the apple tree.

HAVE TO SEARCH FOR POET

Great Mind by No Means Easy to Find, and Some Can Never Discover Him.

There was once a small but mighty nation, now numerous as the sands of the seashore, and no longer so interesting. To this nation was born a poet, and they made him the poet of all time. They took him and taught him all they knew—and they had great things to teach; and when, at their command, he made great dramas, they stood at his elbow; and everything they gave him he gave back to them tenfold.

England was then Shakespeare's land.

The poet is always amongst us; the difficulty is how to find him; he is like the proverbial needle in a bundle of hay.

But one thing is certain—logicians without love will not find him; they leave a desolation, and call it peace—nay, they call it culture. Critics of this sort will allow nothing to exist except themselves. No; I am wrong. There is one thing they admire more even than themselves—the fact accomplish a mundane success.—John Butler Yeats.

Health in Trapshooting.

The great and popular detective of fiction, Sherlock Holmes, once admitted that a man's knees were the seat of great enlightenment and from this source he drew many of his deductions. He may, therefore, scrutinize with interest a trapshooter's knees while he is in action. Do they wobble? He is a seasoned shooter in good physical condition. Do they wobble? He is anxious, perhaps a little new at the game but so happy and willing to get that next target he cares little whether the sun shines or the equinoctial is on.

It is a fascinating sport without placing any strain on the nervous system. In fact, trapshooting strengthens the nerves. It combines sport with fresh air and sunshine and saves many doctors' bills. Physicians and nurses recommend the sport as a health tonic, and if the patients follow the advice given there will not be much need for the physician and the nurse.—Forest and Stream.

Homer.

Homer is an epic poet and not a historian, so it is quite natural that he should have exaggerated everything with poetic license. Moreover, the events which he describes are so marvelous that many scholars have long doubted the very existence of Troy and have considered the city to be a mere invention of the poet's fancy. I venture to hope that the civilized world will not only not be disappointed that the city of Priam has shown itself to be scarcely a twentieth part as large as was to be expected from the statements of the Iliad, but that on the contrary, it will accept with delight and enthusiasm the certainty that Ilium did really exist, that a large portion of it has now been brought to light and that Homer, even although he exaggerates, nevertheless sings of events that actually happened.—Robertson.

You May Bet on It.

When you see a young man sitting in the parlor with the ugliest four-year-old boy that ever frightened himself in a mirror clambering over his knees, jerking his necktie out of place, ruffling his shirt-front, pulling his hair, kicking his shins, feeling in all his pockets for coppers, while the unresisting victim smiles all the time like the cover of a comic paper, you may safely say that the howling boy has a sister who is in a room not 20 feet away, and that the young man doesn't go there just for the fun of playing with her brother.
