

HAPPY NATIVES OF SARAWAK

Under Wise Government, People Live Easy Lives in Their Gloriously Fertile Country.

The tribe of Kayans, inhabiting the head waters of the Barun and Rejang rivers of Sarawak, have lived for unknown generations almost isolated in the interior of the island of Borneo.

For a good many years Sarawak was under the independent government of a white rajah, Sir Charles Brooke, who controlled his mingled subjects with unusual wisdom and sympathy.

Another wise move of the rajah was to continue the native costume—what there is of it—in place of introducing the unsuitable, ugly and artificial modern clothing of Europeans.

GOOD WORK WITH CAMERA

Explorers in Northwestern Canada Have Photographic Studies of Wilderness Wild Life.

After a three years' hunt with the camera in the almost unknown Laird river district in northwestern Canada, H. A. Stewart and John Sonnicksen have come back to civilization by way of Peace river, Alberta, bringing several thousand photographic studies of the manners and customs of the wild life of those remote woods and streams.

Gleaning the Stumps.

The rapid decrease in the number of tall stumps which have been so familiar to the traveler through the coast hills of Oregon, is regarded as an indication of their approaching extinction.

A Filipino Vassar.

What the occidental ideals of universal opportunities of education are to mean to women of the Orient takes on a large significance with the establishment in the Philippines of a university for girls only.

Coquelin's Memory.

"How many parts do you know well enough to play tonight if need be?" somebody asked Coquelin. He took a sheet of paper and wrote down the names of 53 plays of his repertoire.

"You are boasting surely, mon ami?" said the Viscount de Lovenjoul.

"They tried him with 16 plays out of the 53 and he never missed a single cue or made one mistake.—Fortnightly Review.

SUPERSTITION AID TO FLU EPIDEMIC

Native Population of Many Bering Sea Villages Completely Wiped Out.

ASTORIA, Ore., Sept. 5.—Practically the entire adult population of some of the villages in the Bering sea district was wiped out by the influenza epidemic last winter and spring, according to F. A. Daly who has just returned from that region.

land-Alaska Packers' association's Nushagak river cannery, said:

"The epidemic which swept over the Bering sea section last winter was not so virulent as that which swept over the United States, but it wrought great havoc among the natives. The Indians not only had no care, but being extremely superstitious, were easily frightened. As a result, almost the entire adult population of some of the towns was wiped out, while the children survived.

"In some of the villages, dead bodies lay for days awaiting burial, while at others they were torn to pieces by the famishing dogs. It was a horrible sight to see the children, some of whom were infants, forced to stay amid such conditions. At one place it was necessary to destroy everything by fire."

Uncrowned English Queens.

There have been several uncrowned queens of England. The first was Margaret of France, the second wife of Edward I. Money was scarce in the government coffers at the time, and Edward could not afford the expense of a coronation.

Marie, the wife of Charles I, being a strict Catholic, refused to take part in a state function which would compel her to partake of the sacrament according to the rites of the Church of England. Sophia Dorothea, the wife of George I, and mother of George II, was never recognized as queen of England and therefore can not be classed as one of Britain's uncrowned queens.
