

GRANGE FAIR SHOWS WHAT FARMERS DO

BEND, RECOMMENDED FOR COUNTY FAIR.

SPUD QUALITY GOOD

Pantry Shelf-Needle Work Department Make Fine Appearance—Farmers Urged to Produce and Save to Reduce Cost.

Although the exhibits on display yesterday at the Grange hall were not as extensive they id represent what the farmers in the Grange hall are doing and have accomplished during the past season. Although, perhaps, the pumpkins, the carrots, beet, onions and other vegetables were not as large as have been seen at other fairs, they were of fine quality and the farmers of the farming section are due for a great deal of praise for what they have done in the development of a high quality of root crops.

There were more than 150 entries on the tables at the Grange hall. King Spud was evident. If the spud crop of the Deschutes river valley can be judged by what was seen at the fair yesterday the tubers of Central Oregon will command a price that will startle the farmers themselves. Alfalfa shows up unusually good this year as shown by the exhibits. That sunflowers will grow high as juniper trees and bear heads that will make the mouth of the old milch cow water was also manifested. In all the root crops showed up well.

County Fair Asked
The ladies and children had their inning too. The exhibits in the pantry shelf department brought forth considerable praise from the judges. The children's school exhibits were unusual for the rural schools of the county.

Realizing the handicap under which they are working in carrying out each year a community fair of the character as shown yesterday at the Grange hall district a vote taken in the course of the program given during the afternoon to draft resolutions to be presented to the county court that Deschutes county fair be established beginning next fall and that the fair be held in Bend annually.

The program of the afternoon consisted of short talks, C. S. Hudson, president of the First National Bank of Bend, who has been responsible in a large measure for the healthy development of agriculture and livestock raising in the county spoke of the work that has been carried on to improve conditions among the farmers and urged them to persist in their efforts for better farming conditions.

"Farmer" Smith Speaker.
H. E. Lawrence, delegate of the Oregon Federation of Labor spoke at length on increased production throughout reducing the cost of living. He spoke also of the activities of the Grange and its efforts to better the country as one of the means of conditions of the farmers in Oregon.

"Farmer" Smith, of the O.-W. R. R. & N. known widely throughout Central Oregon spoke at length to the farmers present regarding their duty to the country to keep on producing more now as well as during war times. He admonished the farmers against waste. In the opinion of this agricultural expert the farmers and their families are bringing into their homes hundreds of things to produce happiness that they never thought of six years ago. Mr. Smith said that there was nothing wrong with the government. The calamity howlers he pointed out are usually the persons who never said a good thing about the government or did a thing to help it. The high cost of living will come down, according to this "farmer," when all the people realize that they are a part of the whole.

Music was given during the afternoon by the Juniper orchestra consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Rasmussen and Julius Pederson.

NICKEL BY NICKEL

Newspaper Man Dribbled His Profit to Beggar.

Little Transaction by Which Scribe Thought He Was to Make $2.65 Didn't End in Just That Desired Way.

"A newspaper friend of mine," said Mr. Goshington, "tells me of an unusual experience he has had, in fact is still having with a beggar. "He met this beggar first about a year ago. The circumstances attending this first meeting were novel and interesting and my friend wrote a little piece about it which was printed in his newspaper and for which he received $3. As he had given the beggar a nickel he figured that his net profit on this was $2.05. But a couple of weeks later he again met this beggar, who again asked for a nickel, a request that my friend did not feel warranted in refusing. I don't think he would have refused anyway, my friend being an easy mark for beggars; but having profited by his original transaction with this beggar, he felt impelled to hand over this second nickel promptly, thus reducing his net on this little piece to $2.00.

"It wasn't long before my friend discovered that this beggar lived somewhere in his neighborhood and made that part of the town his quarry; for now he used to meet him here and there by intervals. Not always, by any means, when they met did the beggar approach him; commonly they passed each other as any other two might do, with no sign of recognition; but once in a while the beggar would ask for a nickel, which always my friend gave. In this way in the course of three months he gave up 35 cents, thus reducing the net of that $3 to $2.65. Then my friend had an idea.

"He foresaw that if this went on indefinitely, as there seemed every indication it would do, the beggar would get all of the $3, which to my friend seemed scarcely reasonable. But he did think that an even division would be no more than right to the beggar, and so aside the $3 got down to $2.65 he set aside, in his mind, $1.15 as a drawing account to the beggar's credit, and he said to himself that when thus the original fund had been evenly divided he would stop giving and consider that he had done the square thing.

"Well, my friend tells me that, counting a nickel that the beggar drew yesterday, he has now drawn $1.40, so that now it is a question of a very few weeks only, three or four at the utmost, when the beggar will have drawn his full share. "Then, my friend says, he is going to shut down and keep the rest himself; but what I think he will do will be to keep on paying till the whole three dollars is gone, his original profit being thus wiped out completely. I don't know what he can do then, unless he should write, covering all his experiences with this unusual beggar, another and longer story; moving then to another part of the city."

Transform Historic Westminster.
Prominent citizens of London are planning to rebuild the district around Westminster abbey as a memorial to those who distinguished themselves in the world war. The improvements include the construction of a great avenue, 120 feet wide, and a new Lambeth bridge. The design for the bridge will be chosen from plans submitted by architects from all over the world. Splendid buildings are projected for the University of London, for a Shakespearean theater, and for arts and science exhibits. The new avenue will contain groups of statues commemorating the heroic deeds of the British, Canadian, New Zealand and Australian forces, as well as those of Britain's allies. It is intended to make this the finest and most impressive monumental avenue in the British empire.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Chinese Railways Busy.
Latest reports indicate that the 3,000 miles of government railways carry annually more than 25,000,000 passengers a total of 1,000,000,000 miles. Thirty-seven per cent of the receipts of the government railways come from the passenger service. On five of the lines the passenger revenues exceed those from transportation of goods. Ninety-five per cent of the passenger traffic is third-class at an average fare of one cent a mile, which means a large amount of travel by the poorer classes.

Wide macadamized highways are being constructed in the suburbs of many cities. The coming of the automobile will hasten this development. An automobile service across the Gobi desert connecting Peking with Urga and the Russian railway has been inaugurated.

English Lenses Superior.

When aero-photography commenced to play its great part in the war, it was found that the German-made lenses would do the work of picturing from above far better than British-made lenses. But the English opticians set to work, and in a short time they produced lenses that beat the German product fair and square. Captured aero-photographic apparatus during the latter part of the war showed that the lenses were inferior in quality to those made in Britain. No German-made lens has yet been found that would picture a barbed wire entanglement from a height of three miles, but the British product would, and very often did.

LOCALITY NOT WELL NAMED

Desert Island, Off Maine Coast, Has Many Attractions for Naturalist and Pleasure Seeker.

Mount Desert Island started its career with the handicap of a name that suggests a place of glaring, sun-baked sands and rocks. Yet it has overcome this disadvantage to the extent of now being put down as a national park. Moreover, it occupies a coveted position in Bar Harbor, one of the most popular and fashionable summer resorts of the Atlantic coast.

It was Champlain who named the island. He was sailing along the Maine coast when he sighted a patch of land with a backbone ridge of apparently treeless mountains. "Isle of Desert Mountains," Champlain called it, and sailed away. Later it was visited by more curious explorers, and, while the original name stuck, Mount Desert Island came to be known as a delightfully wooded island, with picturesque mountain trails, shadowy lakes and a remarkable variety of birds and plants.

As these reports spread, Mt. Desert acquired a reputation of a name that naturally increasing representation from the world of fashionable society.

Bar Harbor, the best-known summer colony of Mt. Desert, lies on the east coast of the island overlooking Frenchman's bay and the blue Atlantic. There are gorgeous villas and expensively simple cottages in Bar Harbor, a country club, golf courses, beaches, and all the rest of the usual summer resort equipment.

But most people find the mountains and lakes of the island more interesting than the artificial atmosphere of the built-up resort. Birds from arctic regions as well as countless varieties from warmer latitudes find their way to the island, and brighter wood and shore with gay flashes of color. Mt. Desert's long standing as a bird refuge, its scenic beauty and its interesting geologic history—which shows that its mountains and valleys were cut out in an early glacial period—all combined to make it desirable as a national reservation. The idea was long considered, and at last, in 1917, part of Mt. Desert was set aside as a national playground and an official bird refuge.

Big Girl for That.

That tooth was certainly annoying Miss C—, the primary room teacher of the A— school, discover the cause of this annoyance. Ole, a bright-faced little pupil, noting the act suddenly asked: "Teacher, how old are you?" Choosing to ignore his impertinence she made no answer. He was not to be daunted, however. With an expression of scorn he said: "I know you're over twenty, and just think! still sucking your finger."
