GRAND.

Rex Beach's newest photo-drama is "The Brand," presented by Goldwyn at the Grand Theatre, Wednesday and Thursday, and in it the distinguished author returns to the field in which he has won his greatest success—the Alaskan country. It concerns Dan McGill, who comes back to civilization after some years spent as a hermit in the heart of the Yukon country. Once poor, he is now rich and his discovery starts a boom town. Among the wasters and derelicts who drift there is Bob Barclay, a gambler, and a woman. With them is a child. Barclay forces the woman to flaunt herself in the dance hall and in this evil atmosphere the child is growing up.

A chance encounter brings McGill face to face with the woman. Her lawdry finery does not disguise her. He recognizes his wife, cast off years before when McGill drove her out into the storm with her lover, Barclay. She begs McGill to help her to get away from Barclay and when her husband refuses to interfere she leads him to the sleeping child. This does not sway McGill. What the woman says to him then releases a torrent of fury and brings about a typical Rex Beach climax.

LIBERTY.

The producers of "A Daughter of the Wolf," Lila Lee's latest Paramount picture, which will be exhibited at the Liberty Theatre tonight and Wednesday, pronounce it the greatest achievement of her career as a motion picture star.

The story is unique and furnishes the delightful little star with one of the best vehicles yet afforded her for the display of her talents. In the role of the little child of the great North Woods, she is said to be excellent and gives a vivid and true-to-life portrayal.

The story itself abounds in thrills, fights and gripping situations and depicts the adventures of the little daughter of a rough fur smuggler known as Wolf Ainsworth. She goes with him to the city across the border where he disposes of his furs, and there she falls in love with a rich young man.

Their fateful separation, his search for her and the events leading up to their meeting; how her father and his gang who suspect her lover is a "revenor" are just on the point of killing him when the rev-

ALWAYS

When there is something new in the way of machinery put on the market there are the skeptical ones--the ones who doubt its worth---who question its success---who put it down as a failure, or at least imitation.

There are some who doubt the success of the New Overland Four until they have an opportunity to see what it is like and what it can do.

Many experienced motor car owners and drivers see in it a great evolution in the motor car world. Not only providing a car at a reasonable cost, it brings forth a car with all the modern conveniences of the higher priced motor vehicles.

The New Overland Four is here and we are ready to answer any question you may desire to ask. Come, take a ride with us.
