UPTON FORFEITS SUPPORT

From the time when Jay Upton first announced his candidacy for the republican nomination for the senatorship from this district The Bulletin has looked with some favor on his desire to go to Salem, and has stated to him and to friends of his that it expected to support him. The chance, which seemed to us to be a good one, that this section would have a representative in the state senate as well as two in the house, was well worth taking advantage of and Mr. Upton seemed to be well fitted for the position.

Recently, however, evidence has been turning up to indicate that our feeling was not justified and our conclusion is that the voters of this section, and especially of Bend, will make a mistake if they vote for Mr. Upton on Friday. The evidence is found in the latest edition of the Redmond Spokesman and in a campaign circular issued by Mr. Upton.

According to the Spokesman Mr. Upton is urging as a reason why he should be elected the argument that he is being opposed by the Bend Commercial club and the "interests" that would get a fifty year lease on the lake waters south of Bend." Presumably this sort of argument is presented in Redmond because of the anti-Bend feeling that exists there. This is not a fact that the Bend Commercial club is opposing Mr. Upton, however, he can hardly expect Bend men who know this allegation to be untrue to continue in his support. So far as the reference to "interests" is concerned the public is entitled to further facts before it can be expected to put any faith in such vague charges. Since we do not believe further facts are available we must take this sort of thing as a demagogic attempt to catch votes and we do not like demagogic methods.

In his circular Mr. Upton makes further demagogic appeal by asking "Are the farmers awake to the danger of the Power Companies control of water?" and then names the Bend Water Light & Power Co. as one of the power companies opposed to his candidacy. Now as far as Central Oregon is concerned its irrigation future lies in the development of the Benham Falls project. If Mr. Upton wants to array the farmers against the power companies he must show that the power companies are planning things that will mean the end of the Benham Falls project. Here is both the opportunity and the duty to be specific but the fact is he cannot be specific on this subject.

Indeed, anyone who knows the history of the activity concerning this project in the past year knows that T. H. Foley, manager of the Bend Water Light & Power Co., in his position as president of the Bend Commercial club did everything that man could do to obtain the geological examination for the benefit of the project. This indicates anything but a desire to destroy the irrigation project for the benefit of the power company. It is further known that the Bend Water Light & Power company, after making plans for a power development on the Deschutes abandoned its plans because they would interfere with irrigation development and transferred its operations to the Tumalo where it is even more strictly regulated by the state than it would be on the Deschutes.

These charges from Mr. Upton are so completely at variance with the facts and so unfair to Bend, Bend people and Bend interests that he has forfeited any right to support from Bend.

COMMUNICATION.

To the Editor of The Bend Bulletin:
In Friday's edition of the Daily Bend Bulletin there is an item of news that struck me rather forcibly. A woman sues her husband for a

Tired of It.
I've grown so tired of striking that work looks good to me; though I've had little liking, of late, for industry. The war got me unsettled, unfit for honest toil, and, like a palfrey mettled, I reared and pawed the soil. I called on men and brothers to come and strike with me, and set their dads and mothers from tyrants' shackles free. And all the boys responded, and quit their useful tasks, grew whiskers many-fringed, and yawped from kegs and casks. Like me, they called on workers to throw their handsaws down, join the ranks of shirkers who thronged the idle town. And so our graft kept spreading and ran us all in debt, and very few were treading the paths where toilers sweat. I sat, with other bumpkins, around the Blue Front store, and no one grew two pumpkins where but one grew before. And no one plowed a furrow, or made an anvil ring, or came out from his burrow, to laugh and dance and sing. But all were talking sorrow, and pessimism black, and swearing that tomorrow would see our bulwarks crack. And now I'm tired of striking, I need some iron men, and gladly I'd go hiking to make things hum again.

divorce because he objects to low necked dresses. I say good for Clarence J. Russell. If there were more such men in this world there would be less immoral women. It also states that he kicked her repeatedly; this may seem rather brutal, but, if her skirts were as short as those we see on the streets every day, she needed the kicking also.

FIRST CONVENTION.

The first republican national convention convened at Philadelphia, June 17, 1865 (the anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill) following a preliminary session at Pittsburgh, February 22, 1865. There were no precedents and no rules to govern representation or procedure. It was largely a spontaneous affair, with delegates present from all the free-soil states and the nor-der states of Delaware, Maryland and Kentucky.

Henry S. Lane, a breezy Indiana Westerner, was chairman of the convention—himself a rare character. Although a New York newspaper of that day described him as "a man six feet tall, marvelously lean, his front teeth out, his complexion between a sun blister and the yellow fever, and his small eyes glittering like those of a wild cat"—those who scoffed when he appeared remained to cheer, because his homely eloquence turned bedlam loose at the outset of the gathering.

William H. Seward was the most conspicuous man in the party at the time, and unquestionably could have had the presidential nomination for the asking; but he declined to permit consideration of his name. As a result, the only two contenders were Judge John McLean of Ohio, whom the old whigs favored, and General John C. Fremont of California, who caught the convention with the romance of his life.

As a youth, Fremont explored the Rocky Mountains, the great Salt lakes, the Sierra Nevadas and the valleys of the San Joaquin, earning for himself the title of the "Pathfinder." He was known, too, as "Jessie's Choice," because of his romantic elopement as a young lieutenant with charming Jessie Benton, daughter of Senator Benton of Missouri.

Fremont was nominated on the first ballot, with 359 votes to 196 votes for McLean.

William L. Dayton of New Jersey—senator and jurist—was nominated on one ballot for vice-president. He polled 259 votes. His nearest competitor—an interesting historical contemplation—was Abraham Lincoln of Illinois, who polled 110 votes.

The principal planks in the platform declared for free soil, for the admission of Kansas into the Union as a free state, for federal aid to build a railroad to the Pacific, and for liberal rivers and harbors appropriations.

Yes, a cool kitchen, because all the heat is used for cooking. The HUGHES Electric does not heat the room—
