THE EXPERIMENT FAILS

Slowly but surely the socialistic fabric of the Russian Bolshevik government is ripping apart and through the rents there begin to appear features of the modern industrial system that were thought to have gone with the czar. Decrease in production almost to the vanishing point has made the changes necessary.

"Nationalization" of industry was one of the chief socialistic features of the "dictatorship of the proletariat." Under it the former trained managers were driven out and industrial plants were managed by works councils selected from the ranks of the plant employees. Immediately there was nothing but confusion.

With everybody as boss, nobody was boss. Industry was decimated. Factory after factory was closed until in the industrial district of Petrograd alone the number of workers has fallen to about 7 per cent.

"Two facts are apparent from the statistics," says an article in a recent issue of the Monthly Labor Review. "The nationalized industries are almost completely ruined and the position of the workers under the soviet regime has steadily deteriorated." And now "Lenine's government has found itself obliged to do away with what was one of the main achievements of the revolution, the essential feature of nationalization, viz.: the works council and control by the worker."

The Russian Bolshevik government was hailed a few months ago as an experiment in socialism that, if not encouraged, at least should be given a chance to demonstrate its possibilities. Some even have talked of extending the experiment to the United States. Now that news of the Russian results is becoming known, there ought to be no more talk of this nature.

The experiment has failed.

By cleaning up its State Chamber of Commerce quota in 24 hours, Bend has scored again. If the Benham falls project goes ahead there will be plenty of land for the settlers the chamber advertising is expected to bring to the state, and the local subscription will be returned many fold.

While there may be a shortage of irrigation water later in the season, the recent rains have assured plenty of moisture for the time being. Now for some steady sunshine.

The Weightiest Causes.
Men understand not what is among their hands; as calmness is the characteristic of strength, so the weightiest causes may be most silent.—Thomas Carlyle.

Advancing Years.

I'm having trouble with my teeth; the upper ones, the ones beneath, are always loose and sore; I find my hair is falling out, I have the stringhalt and the gout, and walking is a bore. It's hard for me to read a book; my eyes grow weary when I look ten minutes at a page; I have a trumpet for my ears; oh, such things come with passing years, the penalties of age. I'm glad that in the bygone time I salted down my surplus dimes, with wintry years in view; with zeal I plied my trenchant pen, and saved a stock of iron men—enough to see me through. Now by my figtree and my vine I sit and rest and make no whine of fortune or of fate; I view the world with failing eyes, but see the good that in it lies, and keep my smile on straight. And as I gaze I see old men who failed to save the shining yen in days long left behind; they slave away at dreary toil, and long to have six feet of soil in which to end the grind. There's nothing sadder than the sight of some old crippled, weary wight, still toiling for his bread, still drudging for a meager pay, recalling money thrown away, and wishing he were dead.

Over The Garden Fence

Edited by Cousin Cy.

One of the American legion dance committee whispered in Cy's ear this morning that he had official information to the effect that tonight's dance would be one of the most enjoyable affairs held in Bend for some time. He stated that the only class that would be excluded from participation in the dancing would be men with trench feet.

Shush! Give me your ear for a minute. Absolutely on the Q. T., Cy believe the judge is losing all self-respect, worrying too much of late over getting the insurance rates reduced, or he is just naturally drifting back into his youthful habits. But anyway this morning Cy saw Mayor Eastes deliberately smoking a cigarette. Horrid, ain't it? The suggestion was later made that it might have been a cube.

If you go to the Chautauqua, don't make the mistake Cy did last night, and sit by a fat (stout) lady, 'cause, oh, boy! when those seats went down Cy was underneath (the lady) and, honest, it's a miracle that some more serious damage was not sustained, other than an awful squashing.

NOTICE OF SCHOOL ELECTION TO INCREASE TAX MORE THAN SIX PER CENT OVER THAT OF THE PREVIOUS YEAR

Notice is hereby given to the legal voters of School District No. 1 of Deschutes County, State of Oregon, that an election will be held in said district at High School Auditorium, on the 20th day of June, 1920, at 2 to 7 o'clock in the afternoon, to vote on the question of increasing the amount of the tax levy in said District for the year 1920 by more than six per cent over the amount of such levy for the year immediately preceding. Considering the amount of increase over 6 per cent, increase for any year cannot be considered in succeeding years.

It is necessary to raise this additional amount by special levy for the following reasons:

The law went into effect when our tax was very small and 6 per cent increase each year does not meet required expenditures.

Dated this 5th day of June, 1920.

ROBERT W. SAWYER,
Chairman Board of Directors.
Attest:
J. ALTON THOMPSON,
District Clerk.
