Nature's Purpose in Flowers.

However fine and dainty a flower may be it is pressed to do a great service and its colors and forms are all suited to its work. It must bring forth the fruit, or the continuity of plant life will be broken and the earth will be turned into a desert are long.

The color and smell of the flower are all for some purpose; therefore, no sooner is it fertilized by the bee, no sooner does the time of its fruition arrive, than it sheds its exquisite petals and a cruel economy compels it to give up its sweetest perfume. It has no time to flaunt its finery, for it is busy beyond measure.

No Place to Hide.

My most embarrassing moment occurred one day when I was at a dance. There was one fellow there whom I particularly disliked, and who was coming toward me to ask for a dance. I tried to hide behind a woman. She turned around and I said: "Please let me hide behind you; I don't want to dance with that nut that's coming toward me," and the woman, in a cold tone of voice said: "Why, that's my son." It didn't take long for me to clear out.—Exchange.
