BUDGET PLAN WINS SUPPORT OF CANDIDATE

COX PLEDGES HIMSELF IN PORTLAND

ECONOMY IS PURPOSE

Democratic Candidate Declares Senate Blocked Progress—Republican Bankers Have Designs on Federal Reserve, He Says

(By United Press to The Bend Bulletin)
PORTLAND, Sept. 13.—Business reorganization of the government bureau with an efficient budget system as its outstanding feature was pledged by Governor James M. Cox in his speech here today. The candidate promised that one of his first acts in case he is elected, will be to ask congress for authority to appoint a budget commissioner as an assistant to the president for the purpose of effecting economy in appropriations. He charged that the senate "oligarchy," by blocking the peace treaty and keeping war legislation in force, has prevented the return of the government to a normal peace basis. Referring to aid for service men, Cox declared his trip through the northwest had convinced him that the vast undeveloped public domain in this section "offers in some measure a means of the government paying its debt to those who fought its battles in the world war."

BANKERS ACCUSED
SALEM, Ore., Sept. 13.—"Documents are in existence to show that big bankers are seeking to gain control of the federal reserve system," Cox charged in his speech here this morning. He indicated he would make public these documents later, asserting they would reveal that the bankers had made contributions to the republican campaign fund in the hope of crippling the federal reserve law.

THUMB PRINT USED INSTEAD OF NAME

A signature which cannot be forged is that which J. H. Lane, big Silver Lake cattle operator, who was in Bend over the week end, affixes to his checks. His thumb print takes the place of his name. Total blindness caused Mr. Lane to adopt the novel, but effective method of signature.

NATION LOOKS TOWARD MAINE

RESULT OF VOTE IN ROCKRIBBED STATE TODAY EXPECTED TO SHOW TREND OF POLITICS IN AMERICA.

(By United Press to The Bend Bulletin)
AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 13.—Maine's electorate gathered at the polls today to ballot for a governor, state auditor and members of congress and to settle a political race that has been as bitterly fought as any witnessed here in recent years. The contest in Maine has been watched with unusual interest throughout the rest of the country and its outcome, it is predicted, will indicate the trend of the national campaign. A heavy oratorical barrage has been laid down from one end of the state to the other, both democrats and republicans sending nationally-known spellbinders into every district. While conceded to be a republican state, democrats assert they will win this year, pointing out that democratic governors were elected in 1910 and 1914 and the republican majority cut from a normal 12,000 to 5000 when Hughes carried the state in 1916. Col. Frederic H. Parkhurst is the republican candidate for governor. He is opposed by Bertrand G. McIntire, democrat. Parkhurst defeated Gov. Carl E. Milliken at the primaries. McIntire was beaten by Milliken two years ago. The congressional races in Maine's four districts are as follows: First—Republican, Carroll L. Beedy; democrat, Frank H. Haskell. Second—Republican, Wallace H. White; democrat, Wallace N. Price. Third—Republican, John A. Peters; democrat, Archie Towle. Fourth—Ira G. Hersey; democrat, Leon C. G. Brown.

PACKERS MEET IN CONVENTION

(United Press Staff Correspondent)
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 13.—Meat packers from all parts of the country met here today to discuss problems affecting that industry, particularly plans for increasing livestock production. Producers are said to have marketed cattle below the cost of production and many packers report losses in handling beef. This situation, it was feared, may result in a serious decrease in the number of food animals raised. The meeting, called by Thomas E. Wilson, president of the Institute of American Meat Packers, will last three days.

CROWDED SCHOOL CONDITION FOUND

Practically all congestion in the Bend schools is now in the Central buildings, was the report of City Superintendent S. W. Moore this morning. The first primary class is entirely too large for the accommodations provided, and conditions almost as bad as found in the fifth grade room.

FRED WOELFLEN WILL GO SOUTH

TAKES OVER OWNERSHIP OF MADERA DAILY MERCURY—INTERESTS IN THE BULLETIN TAKEN BY ASSOCIATES.

To assume ownership of the Madera Daily Mercury, a well established California publication, Fred A. Woelflen, advertising manager of The Bulletin, has tendered his resignation and expects to leave for the south as soon as he is able to close up his business interests here. With the exception of 18 months spent in the service, Mr. Woelflen has been constantly with The Bulletin since completing his journalistic course at the University of Washington. At the time of his resignation he is serving as city recorder and as commander of Percy A. Stevens post, American Legion. Mr. Woelflen enlisted from Bend in the summer of 1917 and returned late in the winter of 1919 after rising to the rank of captain of infantry. At the time of his return he joined with R. W. Sawyer and Henry N. Fowler in purchasing The Bulletin from George Palmer Putnam. On Mr. Woelflen's resignation his stock is being taken over by his former associates.

EXPECT STRIKE CONTINUATION

PRESIDENT OF ENGINE MEN'S ASSOCIATION BELIEVES THAT "OUTLAW" TROUBLE WILL BE FOUGHT OUT.

(By United Press to The Bend Bulletin)
CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—A continuation of the "outlaw strike" of railroad switchmen, which has hampered transportation for several months, was predicted today by President Reading of the Enginemen's association. "Outlaws" throughout the country, Reading said, are voting today whether to stay out or to return to work. He said indications were that the men will "fight to a finish." Earlier returns indicated that the vote is "overwhelmingly" for returning to work.

PROPOSE MORE EQUAL PLAN FOR LEAGUE COUNCIL VOTE

(By Charles McCann, United Press Staff Correspondent)

The amendment, one of four which will be brought forward by the Scandinavian nations, has the enthusiastic approval of all the South American republics, and if adopted will secure for the minor members of the league far greater representation

LAVA BEAR MAY BE SCIENTIFIC FIND, BELIEVED

SUPOSEDLY EXTINCT SPECIES SEEK DWARF GRIZZLY

Irvin S. Cobb Unable To Get Specimen of Fort Rock "Sandlapper," But Believes Last Survivors of Sun Bear Located.

Belief that the lava bear, or "sandlapper," inhabiting the lava flows in the Fort Rock country, may prove to be the sun bear, supposed by scientists to have been extinct for the past 15 years, was advanced this morning by Irvin S. Cobb on his return to Bend after a week's trip which took him as far south as Crater Lake. Mr. Cobb was accompanied to Bend by N. G. Jacobson, formerly supervisor of the Deschutes National forest; Dr. Dudley Roberts of New York, A. Whisnant of Bend, and movie men who are filming the adventures of the short story writer and humorist. A few specimens of the lava bear have been killed or trapped, and a head, in a fair state of preservation, has been in Mr. Jacobson's possession for some time. He presented the trophy to Mr. Cobb today. Stanley Jewett, formerly of the United States biological survey, who was considered one of the greatest authorities on the animal life of the Northwest, held the belief that the lava bear is a dwarf grizzly, found nowhere else in the world. May Be Sun Bear. Mr. Cobb stated this morning that he believes a diminutive species of grizzly, found in the Seven Devils country in Idaho, and the "sandlapper" of the Fort Rock valley to be identical, or at least very close relatives, and, incidentally, the last survivors of the sun bear, named by the Indians because of his habit of basking on the lava flows. This species was formerly found throughout the lava country of Oregon and California. While no specimens of the "sandlapper" could be obtained, orders were left behind with trappers, who were instructed to take one of the lava bears alive, if possible. His pursuit of the "sandlapper" and his theories regarding the species will furnish the material for an article for the weekly magazine for which Mr. Cobb writes. He hopes that the attention of the Smithsonian institute may be sufficiently aroused to start a more scientific investigation of the subject than he has been able to make. Will Hunt Tuesday. The party's last day out before returning to Bend was spent at Crater Lake, where unusually good fishing was found. Mr. Cobb modestly admitted catching the limit. He had plenty of time for appreciation of the scenic wonders through which he passed, however, and declared the lake to be one of the most magnificent things he had ever seen. Tomorrow morning Mr. Cobb and his companions will start out again, this time under the guidance of W. P. Vandeventer, who intends to show them some real sport in hunting "man's sized" bears. They may be on the hunt for a week, but their exact destination is not being revealed.

WOULD PREVENT CATTLE LOSSES

EXECUTIVE BOARD OF STOCKMEN MEETS

Means of Preventing Petty Stealing One of Greatest Problems Confronting the Ranchers—Wild Horses Encroach on Range

How to stop the petty cattle stealing going on in Central Oregon was the question featuring the discussion Saturday night at the meeting held here by members of the executive committee of the State Cattle and Horse Raisers' association, in session with Central Oregon stock raisers. J. E. Snow of Dayville, William Dube and S. O. Correll of Baker and George Russell of Prineville were the members of the executive committee in the party, arriving in Bend late in the afternoon after a two weeks' auto tour of the stock-raising centers of the state. They left yesterday morning for Prineville. At Saturday night's session the workings of the brand inspection system were explained by Mr. Correll and Mr. Snow, Mr. Russell speaking on the recovery of stolen or strayed stock after it reaches the markets as the result of the activities of the stockmen's association, which now has a membership of more than 600. Ordinance Inoperative. E. P. Mahaffey of the Central Oregon bank brought up the matter of the cattle rustling which is going on, particularly on the Tumalo and Sand Springs ranges. Practically all of the animals so stolen are immediately converted into beef and sold in small lots in and near Bend, it was pointed out. Stockmen in attendance were all of the opinion that a closer following of the state law, which provides that the hide of an animal must be presented with the carcass, would almost eliminate rustling. John Marsh of Tumalo mentioned that an ordinance calling for a meat inspector is now on the city books, and D. L. Jamison, county agriculturist, told the history of the ordinance, explaining that the expense of retaining an inspector was to be borne equally by the city and the stockmen of Central Oregon. Failure of the cattle owners to produce their half had rendered the law inoperative, he said. Mr. Mahaffey suggested that small subscriptions be asked from each of the various cattlemen's organizations in Deschutes county, and it was the general opinion that this should be done. Of interest to stockmen in the lower part of the state was the question introduced by J. H. Lane of Lake county, who declared that wild range horses, practically valueless, are encroaching on the cattle range, taking feed needed by the beef stock. In an attempt to make the wild horses of some use, the Cattle and Horse Raisers' association has already encouraged the establishment of horse meat markets, but with only limited success.

HIGH WIND FAILS TO BOTHER PLANE

The first "jitney" flying done by the planes of the Bend Aircraft corporation came yesterday afternoon, when passengers were taken up from Knotts field. A heavy wind, quartering the field, made no difference to the company's pilots and take-offs and landings indicated nothing unusual in weather conditions.

Dispatches received said that 26 mills were taken over in Turin alone.
