ANCIENT AND MODERN LIGHT

Users of Electricity Today Read With a Smile of the "Link Boy" of Old England.

A couple of centuries ago permanent street lights in the large cities of the world were almost unknown. In old England "link boys" carrying torches, were hired by gentlemen to light the way for them when they went out in the evening in London. When lamp-posts were placed in the city streets the link boys' occupation was gone. With progress of time lanterns lighted by candles or by oil were succeeded by gas or by electric lights. Every city of the civilized world normally has its principal streets lighted at night, and the link boy today is as superfluous as the sedan chair. In a similar way the famous caves of the world, such as the Mammoth cave of Kentucky and Luray cavern in Virginia were formerly lighted by candles carried by guides who conducted travelers. But today practically all these subterranean places that are visited by sightseers are equipped with electric lights, and instead of carrying a bag of candles the guide merely turns on or off a series of electric switches as he conducts a party through the cave. Railroad tunnels were formerly unlighted, excepting the lights in the trains that passed through them, but today tunnels, as well as stations, are lighted by electricity.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

SHOW NAMED FOR A VALLEY

Quite a Few of Those Who Use the Word "Vaudeville" Are Ignorant of Its Origin.

The Fairest Lady turned to her escort at the variety show the other night during the intermission and asked him where the word "vaudeville" came from anyway.

"Movies" is simple, she said. Anyone can trace the origin of the word coined by Young America and now generally used. The British "cinema" applied to cinematograph pictures is also easily traced.

It wasn't until next day that the escort, who had pretended not to hear the Fairest Lady's question about vaudeville, got a chance to look it up. Then he found that the word came from the French "Val de Vire"—a valley in Normandy where originated many humorous and satirical drinking songs that became popular all over France—known by the name of the place of their origin. Eventually the word became corrupted to "vaudeville" and was applied to a certain kind of popular song. Its application was limited to such songs until the end of the Eighteenth century, when it began to refer also to an entertainment that included singing and dialogue as well as dancing and variety acting.

Failure is the Final Test. Real winners in life never show the white feather. They are like the drummer boy in our Civil war, who, when his regiment was being mowed down still kept pushing ahead, beating an advance. When ordered to beat a retreat, the boy replied that he had never learned how—he had only been taught to beat an advance.

The finest type of manhood is never overwhelmed or entirely dismayed no matter what comes. If a man of this kind loses property, if his ambition is thwarted and his plans demolished, his spirit remains undaunted, his courage, his resistance and his self-confidence are unimpaired, and he can start again. Many a man has been made by his failures, because he used them as a stepping stone for his advance.

Failure is the final test of persistence and an iron will; it either crushes a life or solidifies it.—Orison Swett Marden in the New Success Magazine.

GAUDY COSTUME HIS FOIBLE

Marshal Murat, Napoleon's Famous Cavalry Leader, Seemingly Had Craze for "Fine Feathers."

Marshal Murat was the dandy among Napoleon's generals. One Paris tailor said that in some years he had made as much as 100,000 francs worth of suits, overcoats and uniforms for Murat. He liked to invent new and fantastic uniforms, he strutted about in a suit of sky-blue overalls covered all over with gold spangles, and he decorated his bushy with aigrettes. On the occasion of his triumphant entry into Warsaw when he supposed he would be made king of Poland, he wore an impossible looking uniform, red leather boots, tunic of cloth of gold, sword belt blazoning with diamonds, and a great bushy of fur decked out with costly plumes. On this occasion Napoleon lost his temper and testily exclaimed to his general: "Go and put on your proper uniform; you look like a clown." But the emperor was not misled by Murat's love of finery, for it is recorded that he once said of him: "You may smite at my dandified marshal, but you will notice that when columns are shot down today, Murat's gaudy plume will be dancing in the hottest of the fight. Let a hero have one folly, gentlemen."
