THE C. O. I. SITUATION

As we understand the situation, the C. O. I. project settlers who have voted down the proposed bond issue with which the company's interest in the project was to have been purchased, have left themselves in an exceedingly difficult position.

Whatever may be the rights of the settlers under the Carey act, it is a fact that the C. O. I. company is in control of the project, and that any attempt to enforce an ouster under that law, assuming that such thing were possible, would mean extended litigation, great expense and long delay. Under existing conditions delay will be fatal.

Taking the project as it stands, the thing the settlers are interested in is the continuous delivery of water in sufficient quantities for irrigation. For the delivery of water, the canals, ditches and flumes must be kept in condition, that is maintained. For this purpose the settlers are obliged, under their contracts, to pay maintenance fees to the company, which, in turn, expends them on the work.

Because of increased costs, the company has not been receiving enough to do the maintenance work as it should be done and it has not been able to obtain an increased fee from the public utility commission or otherwise. It now takes the position, we understand, that hereafter it will spend on maintenance only so much as it receives from the settlers. When this money is gone, the work will stop. This is what makes the position of the settlers difficult.

There is no doubt that the fees received will not be sufficient to put the system in proper shape for water delivery, and that means great loss, even ruin, to the settlers. We cannot blame the company. It can hardly be expected to borrow for maintenance when there is no expectation of seeing its money returned. Undoubtedly its stockholders have had tremendous losses on the project. They have now reached their limit. They can go no further.

If we have the facts, the property which was to have been turned over by the company if the sale had carried, has a value well above the purchase price, and it was property that would not necessarily come to the settlers if they got possession under the Carey act. In other words, there was value for them in the transaction. Nevertheless they have turned the sale down.

The question now is, what about next summer's water? Somebody seems likely to go short. If the settlers want to avoid this it would seem to be desirable to hold another election and vote the bonds.

Every man, woman and child in Bend should deposit a certain amount regularly in one of our home safes. Make the decision now.—The First National Bank.

Hard To Figure

I know not why I always think a new year will be fine, and feel it will not put a kink in glowing plans of mine; or why a year seems on the blink when 'tis in its decline. "I've muddled things this year," I say, when I regard the past; "I've let my kopecks fly away like leaves upon the blast, but doubtless after New Year's Day improvement will be vast. The new year brings a change of luck to every human freak; my bank account the old year struck, and made my coffers leak, but now I'll save a silver buck, and maybe two, each week." The new year has a magic touch, or so, methinks, it seems; she is a vampire and as such she brings us hophead dreams, and ere she dies we get in Dutch, with all our burnished schemes. I know I simply can't be wise, my deeds are all mistakes, I travel with the bonehead guys whose high resolves are fakes; how then shall I to wisdom rise because a new year breaks? In folly I've grown old and gray, and in my Moated Grange I count great chances thrown away, and it is passing strange that I exclaim on New Year's Day, "Now things will take a change!"

"Friends, the taxes are indeed very heavy, and if those laid on by the government were the only ones we had to pay we might more easily discharge them; but we have many others, and much more grievous to some of us. We are taxed twice as much by our idleness, three times as much by our pride, and four times as much by our folly; and from these taxes the commissioners cannot ease or deliver us by allowing an abatement."—Benjamin Franklin.
