LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE WANTS NO "BLUE LAWS," DECLARES PASTOR

The greatest hoax that has been perpetrated upon the American people in a long time is the notion that the churches are seeking the enactment of Sunday "blue laws," is the declaration of J. Edgar Purdy, pastor of the local Methodist church. "Sedate editors, conservative cartoonists and high-salaried movie promoters have vied with each in swallowing, lock, stock and barrel, the biggest practical joke of the decade," Mr. Purdy said. "There has been no 'blue-law' legislation proposed in any state, nor at Washington, D. C., by any church, group of churches, or any other organization purporting to create autoless, paperless, cardless, fishless or joyless Sundays."

"The joke began 140 years ago," he declared. "The original 'blue laws,' like the present, never existed outside the fertile brains of excited men. In 1781 Dr. Samuel Peters was driven out of New England because of his Tory inclinations. Arriving in London, he proceeded to avenge himself against the colonies by contributing belittling articles to the London papers. He originated the 'blue laws' and published them as samples of New England legislation. His veracity is illustrated by one of these articles, in which he states that the river at Bellows Falls 'flows so fast as to float an iron crowbar.' The 'blue laws' were never the laws of any state!

"The Lord's Day alliance, which some newspapers credit with the present 'blue laws' movement, is made up of representatives of several leading Protestant denominations. It is not a secret society. Its activities for the past 33 years have been confined to 'Preservation of the Sabbath for rest, for deeds of charity, religious education and worship, for those who so choose to observe it.' But the alliance has never proposed the fanatical and ridiculous program attributed to it!

"A few years ago this alliance led the movement which obtained 'One day's rest in seven' for 100,000 postal employees. Recently it opposed a measure in New York state which proposed to give the members of certain religious sects the privilege of doing business on Sundays. In this opposition the alliance was joined by business men throughout the state who saw in the bill the danger of competition compelling them all to open up, thereby losing the holiday. And that's the kind of work the Lord's Day alliance is doing.

"Since the closing of the saloons many people have been nervous. Last November someone shouted, 'Boo! The church is after our Sunday joy!' and the whole nation stampeded. Movie barons issued a 'call to arms'; a 'parade of protest' marched down Broadway, New York; big city newspapers, ordinarily reliable, stated that legislation was pending which would stop Sunday trains, Sunday papers, Sunday movies, and Sunday everything. Even the Saturday evening Post devoted precious space to the subject.

"A proper observance of the sabbath is a credit to any nation or individual," the pastor concluded, "but the church of the present day has no intention of forcing such observance by legislation. To see that everyone has the opportunity properly to observe the sabbath and to preserve for ourselves a day for rest and worship is the utmost of the churches' legislative program. Those who imagine otherwise are 'seeing things.'"
