MUFFLERS

We are thoroughly in sympathy with the feeling that has prompted the introduction of an ordinance to do away with the nuisance of cock crowing. As we get away from the village class, with houses closer together, we are more likely to be disturbed by noises from neighboring houses and, if our neighbors keep hens, the crowing of a rooster is usually the most disturbing noise we hear. What is there more disagreeable than the sounds from a nearby hen yard when you are trying to get the sleep you want in the early morning?

Most of the advantages of community life are bought by the curtailment of personal rights, either by ordinance or by common consent. Such ordinance as is proposed is in keeping with this idea. It is a desirable thing and one that is perfectly proper for legislation by the council.

In addition to the neighborliness that one may show by ceasing to keep roosters, there are the best of reasons from other points of view. The department of agriculture has frequently pointed out that, except for a few months in the spring, when eggs are being produced for hatching, there is no use in having a rooster around. In fact, it is better not to have one. To have to feed one is wasteful and the eggs from a roosterless flock keep better than fertile eggs.

We think the ordinance should be adopted. And, by the way, in somewhat the same connection, would it not be a good plan to see to the enforcement of the existing ordinance concerning automobile mufflers — another noise preventing device?

The Pariah

The man whose credit's on the blink is known by all upon the street, and it is sad to see him slink around the town on furtive feet. He has a frightened, hunted air, no tranquil hour's by him enjoyed; he dodges here, he dodges there, the merchant princes to avoid. Perchance he is a gifted scout, the fire of genius in his glim, but he has worn his credit out, and there's no welcome sign for him. No smile of greeting warms his heart as he goes shuffling down the street, but people say, in shop and mart, "There goes Jim Jinx, the blamed old beat." His children suffer for his sins, when to the schoolhouse they repair, scorned by the grocer's stall fed twins, and by the village butcher's heir. His wife has met a cold rebuff in nearly every store in town, when she would buy on tick some stuff to make herself a humble gown. So he and his, without the pale, dishonored go their futile way, because he doesn't bring the kale to pay his bills on settling day. And it is strange that any man will such a state of things endure, and be the village also ran, when there is such a simple cure. Let him but show a wise desire to pay his creditors their mon, and nothing more will he require to gain a footing in the sun.

FEAR LOSS OF ELK HERDS

Animals in Yellowstone Park Are Rapidly Disappearing, According to Official Reports.

Officials of the United States Department of Agriculture are alarmed over the threatened extermination of the elk herd in Yellowstone park. On the ranges of the park, where ordinarily thousands of these animals could be seen, only a very few have been observed this winter. Several theories have been offered to account for the marked shrinkage in the herd. Among these is the probability that the majority died from natural causes or had been killed during the last year. Another is that the open fall and winter caused the elk to remain in hiding in some retreat deep in the mountains and in the higher and more inaccessible portions of the park. Open falls in the past, however, have not caused the elk to abandon their usual customs and habits.

That there has been an alarming shrinkage in the Yellowstone herd during the last five years is an established fact, according to figures supplied by the Department of Agriculture. In 1914 it was estimated at about 25,000; in 1917, 17,500 were counted, and, if the figures for the present year, estimated by those close

EXPLOSION FEARED FROM PROHIBITION

Psychologist Predicts Widespread Insanity As Result of Repression Caused By Dry Laws.

By Harold D. Jacobs, (United Press Staff Correspondent) NEW YORK, May 12.—"Prohibition has removed the American safety valve, and the country will 'blow up' within three years," Andre Tridon, psycho-analyst, declared today. This "explosion," Tridon explained, would be signalized by the rush of hundreds of thousands of persons to insane asylums and sanitariums. "The greatest cause of insanity is repression," Tridon said. "Every person is endowed with the craving for self-expression. This may take the form of music, art, oratory or what not. The American people, particularly the Anglo-Saxon element, have been taught to repress these natural desires. A drink or two enabled them to slough off their natural reserve, and they sang, or orated, or did what they most longed for.

"People who did not seek an outlet for these things through the temperate use of alcohol, or the temperate use of drugs, often became insane—and their insanity took the form of doing to the extreme the thing they had repressed.

"Now we have prohibition. Its strict enforcement will bottle up these emotions and those who lack the strongest of will power will be a prey to nervous diseases, ending in in touch with the situation, are true, there remains much less than half this number. In 1919, 3,500 head were killed in the Yellowstone band, the supervisor of the Absaroka national forest reports.

The Department of Agriculture points out that no herd of wild animals can sustain an annual shrinkage in numbers for any length of time and not face complete extermination within a few years.

DENIES WOMAN IS MYSTERY

Man Is Puzzling Himself for Nothing, Is Assertion Made by Writer of Gentle Sex.

After declaring to the reporters who met him in New York that the women of today care for nothing but having a good time and have assumed an attitude of pagan enjoyment, the English essayist, Gilbert K. Chesterton, is reported as moving majestically along the pier shaking hands with the custom officers and leaving Mrs. Chesterton to see about the baggage. "My wife understands these things; I don't," he said, with a sweep of his stick.

It is evident from the report that, although woman may have changed much since before the war, as Mr. Chesterton says, some of the oldtime masculine attitude toward them remains. May Stranathan, writes in the Pittsburgh Dispatch. In further proof of this, the Englishman goes on to speak in the same old prewar way about the psychology of women, using the familiar words, "I speak reverently as of a mystery, for a man never knows what a woman will do," and then he tells how she will act under certain circumstances.

The mystery about it is not in the psychology of woman, but in the fact that, having supposed that a woman would act in the way most natural to all humanity, he thinks it is mysterious because a woman does it. He describes a man as likely to act the same way under similar circumstances, but does not see any mystery in the masculine point of view.

An American Worker's Creed

"The Company for which I work is a mighty good employer and I think any employe who hasn't an interest in the success of his employer ought to quit or get fired. My idea is that when a man sells his services to an employer, he sells his loyalty at the same time. If he can't be loyal and give the best that is in him, he ought not to work for that particular employer. By being loyal I don't mean that one has to be a toady, or that he has to lose any of his independence. The most loyal may be the most independent, and usually is."
