"We know nowadays that even a universal education * * * supplies only the basis for a healthy republican state. Next to education there must come abundant, prompt, and truthful information of what is going on in the state, and frank and free discussion of the issues of the times." H. G. Wells, "The Outline of History."

"THE LAST GREAT STAND"

President Harding's proclamation setting aside the period of May 22 to 25 as Forest Protection week bids the American people to look to the protection and care of their remaining forest resources. That there is need for such admonition is fully warranted when one faces squarely the facts of timber depletion. The Pacific northwest is now the nation's wood lot—how long will it remain such if forest fires are not kept out of our timber? Unless each man, woman and child that goes into our forests realizes a personal responsibility regarding fire the "last great stand" of timber of the northwest will go, just as the white pine of New England and the lake states went, and as the yellow pine of the south is going now.

Timber depletion has now reached a point in this country where three-fifths of the primeval forests are gone and where 61 per cent of the timber that is left is west of the great plains. Colonel W. B. Greeley, chief forester of the United States forest service, recently told the members of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Liberal use of American forests was a necessary part of the commercial growth of this nation, Colonel Greeley believes, but forest protection and reforestation should have been practiced, if not from the start, at least in late years.

There is an abundant area of forest land in this country to support all industries, and a liberal supply of wood is most necessary to the people of this country. It was thought that, like the European countries, we would use, when our civilization was older, but one-third or one-half as much wood per capita as we did in the early days. But this rule does not affect the American people. The older the states and communities in this country grow the more timber

Disarmament

If all the nations would disarm, 'twould be a splendid thing, and we might live secure from harm, and dance around and sing. How happy we should be to know that wars would come no more, that no new Hindenberg would go to splash around in gore. I thought, when war was at its height, that when the war was done, there would be left on earth no wight who'd want to pack a gun. I thought we'd had enough of groans, the war fans to deter, for all the world was sick of bones and death and blood and fur. Now while the nations all profess a strong desire for peace, they boost the same old martial mess, and war spiels never cease. "We'd dump our armament today," one monarch sadly yips, "but there's a king across the way, who's building countless ships. He's building guns and submarines to multiply his power, and we would surely spill the beans if we relaxed an hour." The king across the way remarks, "I can't disarm alone, for there are sundry royal sharks who'd like to lift my throne. I have to build my guns and boats if I would keep my throne; I do not long for others' goats, but I would hold my own." And so the old, old game proceeds, and will till time is done, and this poor foolish planet speeds no more around the sun.

they seem to require in one form or another. Let us save what we have left.

If 45 minutes is the best time that can be made on The Dalles-California highway between Terrebonne and Bend, a distance of 24 miles, the road must be worthless.

The council has killed the rooster ordinance. Now will it either repeal or see to the enforcement of the auto muffler ordinance?

Apparently the Almighty has undertaken to settle Central Oregon's irrigation problems.

SHANIKO DISTRICT HAS ANOTHER RAIN

Roads Again Muddy—Had Dried Since Early In Week—Dalles-California Highway Is Excellent.

The roads in the vicinity of Shaniko were rendered muddy again yesterday, according to Navy Recruiting Officers W. E. Barrington, E. E. Meyers and J. J. Sauers, who drove through from Portland to Bend on special work. They passed through a very heavy rainstorm in Wasco county.

The Dalles-California highway in Deschutes county was declared excellent by the members of the party, except where it was necessary to turn out for passing cars, the side of the road not being packed. They came from Madras in 2 hours and 15 minutes.

About three men are being recruited into the navy each week from Oregon, the officers stated.

Washington's Religion.
 There has been considerable controversy over the extent to which religious belief entered into Washington's character. His own chronicles show that most of his Sundays, except during the presidency, when he felt obliged to set an example, he spent in answering letters, going over his accounts, hunting or doing any business that those with whom he was negotiating had no scruples. In choosing people to work for him he set up no barriers of creed, judging men from the standpoint of honesty, industry and ability.

"Out of The Chorus"

Out of the Chorus into a First Family—

The man she married was a scion of one of the most aristocratic families, and this family began at once to plot the ruin of the "scum" who had dared to enter its midst.

But the chorus girl bride was to prove that her blood was just as noble as her husband's when it came to saving his life from the terrible result of his family's plot.

Vacation Earnings--

There will be many boys who will spend a part of their vacation period this year on the ranches and in the mills of Central Oregon. After the school year such occupation will prove beneficial, and the money earned will help defray expenses for the next school term. This will be particularly important to the boy who has finished his high school work and intends to enter college in the fall.

If the savings habit has already been formed, there will be no difficulty in accumulating a tidy sum by September. If the habit has not been formed, you can't start too soon, and the Central Oregon Bank stands ready to help you. One dollar will open an account with us, and our safe type banks, or dime savings banks will make thrift easy, you will find.
