NEW RACES SOUGHT TO DEVELOP PANAMA

Immigrant Government Sends Immigration Agents To Lure Farmers In European Countries.

PANAMA, July 23.—The government of Panama has sent special immigration agents to Czechoslovakia, Austria, Italy, Spain and the Canaries, to induce farmers from those countries to come to Panama.

The government has begun the construction of two hundred miles of highways in the most fertile parts of the interior, and intends to follow with several hundred miles more, with the idea of opening up the country. But after the roads are built (construction has been begun and the money is in hand to pay the bills) they will not be brought unless few inhabitants are brought into the country.

The native of Panama has his own farm and is living on it contentedly, under primitive conditions in most cases, but conditions which are well adapted to the tropics and which suit him. He works little but lives well. His surplus produce is such as can conveniently be carried to a seaport on mule back, and he enjoys the weekly trip to the village.

But such people cannot develop a country, because they are too busy enjoying life. The idea of the government is to induce immigration of experienced farmers from the south of Europe, who are also hard workers, assign them land, secure them in their title, and even assist them with implements and seed for the first few years.

tries to do their duty for them," he said. "We don't dare to get too far ahead of public opinion. Perhaps no one realizes this as does Woodrow Wilson. Right or wrong, he lost out because he distanced the opinion of the great majority of the people.

Because of colored news, Mr. Hardy said that he had as yet been unable to form a clear opinion as to the situation in Russia where what he characterized as "the greatest experiment" in government is going on.

"We must have the facts," he said. "We are helpless otherwise. The newspapers can perform an immense service by keeping policy out of the news columns, and by having more trained observers."

"The newspaper is the fundamental medium of advertising," said D. M. Botsford, of Botsford & Constantine, advertising agency which uses all mediums, including magazines and billboards. Later he said that the country newspaper is the best advertising medium. He urged the support of reputable advertising agencies, which create advertising business.

Editors Viewing Clash

Two editors clashed over the subject of a People's column in the newspaper were advanced by B.

F. Irvine, editor of the Portland Journal, and G. C. Leiter, northwest editor of the Telegram, Mr. Irvine was not present, his paper being read by A. Whelan.

"A 'Letters from the People' column, a tribune where all may have a hearing, affords a safety valve to men who think they have a grievance, and makes them feel as if they were living in a free country," was Mr. Irvine's thought.

"If the writer is in error, he will be opposed if he has a grievance, in providing an outlet for the newspaper is rendering a high service. Any reasonable utterance should be admitted. The newspaper columns should be open to all, that the charges of the 'Brass Check' that be disproven.

No Danger in Red

"There is no real danger in the mouthings of the Red. He cannot lead thinking men away. I would say print his communication, to give the lie to the theory of the 'kept press.'"

"A people's column impartially conducted makes the paper popular. It is one of the most widely read departments of the paper. The editor himself should keep in touch with it. It gives the reader a feeling of partnership."

Warning in regard to the use of the People's column was sounded by Mr. Leiter, who insisted that every communication should be genuine, and signed by the actual contributor. No letter should be printed anonymously.

"The paper is responsible for the communication printed, unless in the same issue it disclaims it editorially," said Mr. Leiter. "I do not believe in making the newspaper a safety-valve for semi-radical or semi-anarchistic utterances, nor that it should be so conducted as to capitalize social discontent."

Hypocrisy Scored

"Our code of ethics could oppose the hypocritical basis for securing public support often used, of advertising that a certain newspaper is the only friend of the people. It should be made unethical for a paper to attack its competitors with the charge that it is the tool of certain interests. I am glad to say I have seen no such tendency on the part of the smaller newspapers."

Mr. Leiter indicated that he would refuse to print letters which he considered dangerous.

A. E. Koen, of the Polk County Observer, showed that the normal cost of advertising to the weekly paper of 1900 circulation is never less than 20 cents, and stated that 20 cents should be the minimum charge.

Speaking informally for the dailies, President Ingalls stated that he had found 25 cents an average cost, and that 25 cents is the minimum charge for a column inch.

Guy LaFollette, of the Central Oregonian spoke on "Special Editions, their Value and How to Publish One," telling of his experiences and discoveries in connection with the publication of the big edition he got out this spring.

Mat Service Discussed

Resolutions condemning the practices of the American Press association, which acts as a go-between for the advertising agencies and the small newspapers, with a 15 per cent commission, and recommending that small daily newspapers shall not employ special advertising representatives, were authorized by the editorial association in yesterday afternoon's session. The motion was made by E. E. Brodie of the Oregon City Enterprise.

Many of the editors stated that they had already severed connection with the press association, and found they could deal advantageously with the individual advertiser or with the agencies. The association robs both the advertiser and the publisher, several of the speakers declared.

"Why advertising mat service does not pay on the average country newspaper" was discussed by George H. Aiken of the Ontario Argus. Such a system was declared a nuisance in a small shop, on account of the work involved in preparing to cast four or five mats a week. The merchants cannot be educated to take advantage of mats, and the pictures are seldom representative of the goods, he declared. The mat service does pay at Christmas or Easter, he conceded.

For the dailies, Hal E. Moss, of the Oregon City Enterprise, stated that the mat service is indispensable.

Opinion was divided on the autocaster service, prepared by the American Press association.

"Farmer" Smith, long acquainted with the rural newspaper business, emphasized the value of rural news, rather than editorial opinion in building up a country paper.
