Into the Heart of the Home

IN THE MAJORITY of homes electric service is present and helping during the hours of necessary housework; it is a willing assistant in the preparation of meals and an aid to their enjoyment; the evening lamp, symbol of intimate family life, is another evidence of this service.

Right into the very center of the family circle goes the electric service of your light and power company—into the heart of the home.

We appreciate this privilege.

While without electric service the homes would lack much in the comforts and conveniences which we have come to regard as essential, we do not lose sight of the fact that without your friendly goodwill we could not exist.

"We," remember, are the men and women, your neighbors, who operate this public service organization, your electric light and power company.
