FAIR BILL KILLED

(Salem Capital Journal.)

The gasoline sales tax bill to raise $3,000,000 for the Portland 1925 exposition is dead, as it ought to be.
If the people vote upon it, it will be because it is revived by initiative petition for the general election in November.

There is little question of the illegality of the senate procedure whereby it was sought to overrun the constitution and turn a minority into a majority, and thereby place the amendment upon the ballot for the special election. The constitution cannot be altered by senate action.

The fair promoters induced the governor to call the special session so as to adopt measures to submit to the people the raising of $3,000,000 for the fair by direct taxation. Before the legislature met, a majority of both houses had agreed to vote against direct tax measures for fair financing.

The fair boomers then switched to the gasoline sales tax bill, the property tax idea being abandoned, and many of those who had opposed the latter, voted to place the burden of fair finance upon the motorist.

Arguments against the property tax, also held against the gasoline tax. The principle is the same—discriminatory class legislation for sectional benefit. Both set vicious precedents and are an abuse of the taxing power. In addition, the gas bill robbed the highway repair fund.

What might be called the "agrarian bloc" consisting of 14 senators stood pat against the fair bill and prevented its legal passage. Great credit is due their efforts and they truly reflected the sentiments of the rural sections they represented.

The road protection and regulation bill program went through without a struggle and much other legislation of emergency character was enacted. As it is, the special session only cost $220,000, much of which would have been covered in deficiency appropriations next year, instead of over $3,220,000.

Melancholy

The winter days are colder than any days should be; in one week I grow older than I should grow in three; oh, sorrow seems my potion, I'm full of sad emotion while rubbing Jimpson's lotion upon my starboard knee. I see the young ones playing and whooping with a will; they're skating and they're sleighting upon the icy hill; ah, would that I could follow and in the snowdrifts wallow! but I sit here and swallow Doc Ginger's Duplex Pill. Play on, oh youthful friskers, your youth will not endure! Soon you'll be wearing whiskers, and grief will dog your spoor; like you I once was playing, adown the hillside sleighing; and now you see me spraying my limbs with Spavin Cure. Once I was young and stalwart, no blemish did I own, except a rather small wart ferninst my collarbone; but youthful years go flying, and now you see me sighing, consuming pills and trying to can the dotard's groan.
My sorrow seems a fixture, in vain I try to smile, while taking Johnson's Mixture of Tar and Castor Oil; I'm old and tired and gloomy, my eyes are weak and rheumy, and pharmacists come to me and bear away my pile. But when the clouds are parted, and sunshine's streaming through, I won't be broken-hearted, I won't be sad and blue; it's when the heavens clear up you see the old boys cheer up; and now for Jenkin's Syrup of Cockleburs and Glue.
