FAMOUS BEAUTY TO APPEAR ON SCREEN AT THE LIBERTY

It was Marion Davies' beauty, expressive eyes, and piquant mannerisms, exhibited in the famous Ziegfeld Follies, that gave her the opportunity to enter motion pictures and develop into the talented emotional actress that she is today. Miss Davies, who will appear at the Liberty theatre next Wednesday in her latest picture, "The Restless Sex," first appeared on the stage with Fred Stone and the late Dave Montgomery in "Chin Chin." Subsequently she had prominent roles in "The Century Girl," "Miss 1919," "Betty," and "Oh, Boy."

being taxed for the sake of a Portland festival.

The motorist is awakening to the proposition that every time the state needs coin for anything nowadays, he is being made the goat. When the legislature feels like creating a new commission, it slaps another assessment against the sorely-beset automobilist.

A Baker man, according to the Herald of that city, put it well recently when he said: "It seems there is a disposition to put us in the class with the saloons before the draught. In those days, when it was thought more money was needed for some purpose, a license was raised or an additional tax imposed upon the saloons. Now the want to put the automobile drivers in the same position."

Granted, then, that the gasoline tax will go before the people. It will never carry. The bet is a hundred to one shot. The autoists and all their allied interests, not neglecting John Farmer, who burns a lot of gas, one way or another, a mighty combination when sized up in the lump, will rise in their might and smite the proposed tax as nothing in this state was ever smote before.

The outlanders and the uplanders of this Beaver state are not going to pay for Portland's fair, or help to pay for it. The backers of the fair can talk until they are black in the face about it being for the good of all the state, and about our public duty and all that sort of thing.

On the fair issue, this is a commonwealth of show-me Missourians. Multnomah county, after charging the state with an extra season of the legislature, and the added cost of putting the gas tax on the ballot next spring, will appreciate the situation after the votes are counted. Thereupon the folks who want this fair so bad, will dig in and stage it themselves, just as they should have planned to do from the beginning.

TAKES CENSUS OF LIFE IN FOREST

Wallowa Supervisor Enumerates 2930 Deer Overlooked By Hunters, But Can't Count Rabbits.

PORTLAND, Jan. 7.—N. J. Billings, supervisor for the Wallowa national forest, in Oregon, is apparently one of the most patient men in the world.

He has just completed a survey census of the wild life in his district and has discovered that hunters overlooked 2930 deer in that domain.

In addition to the deer there were 240 bears, 245 elk, and 70 sheep registered with the places of residence and family record.

The report, by districts, contains a detailed count of the bear, deer, elk, and mountain sheep, known personally and by hearsay to Billings. "I was sorry I couldn't get a chance to count the rabbits," Billings apologized in a report footnote, "but I was just a little too slow for them to get anything more than a passing acquaintance."

He estimates, however, that there are only about 3,000,000 of the long-eared citizens of his domain—jackasses excluded.
