TINY TOTS IN PLAY WEDDING

CHILDREN AND ELDERLS
PLEASED

Entertainment Given Under Auspices of Presbyterian Ladies' Guild
Brings Many Laughs—Small Actors Are Well Trained.

The Presbyterian church auditorium was filled last night with an appreciative audience which enjoyed every minute of the "Tom Thumb" wedding entertainment staged by Miss M. A. Fell under the auspices of the Ladies' guild. Interest in the doings of the well trained children was increased by the fact that a majority of the grown folks in the audience were watching their own children act.

Children's love of "dressing up" was never better satisfied than in this entertainment, in which all of the characters wore "grown up" clothes, evening and wedding gowns, or dress suits and stovepipe hats. The arrival of each new character provoked a gale of merriment among the children in the audience, which was shared with a little less abandon by the elders.

Someone evidently had been whispering local gossip to the director, for the rejected suitor, the bachelor friends of the groom and the old maids bore very familiar names.

A negro strolled into a public library. "Ah want an encyclopaedia," he said. "Whose encyclopaedia, and what volume?" asked the attendant. "Ah don't rightly know," was the answer. "It's like dis: Us colored folk done gone organize a literary society. Ah'm on de program for a paper on 'Current Events.' Ah's jes' like ter kinder read up a bit on de subject."

To The Boy's Advantage

A thrifty young man says that one of the earliest possessions in his remembrance was a savings book, and further that he has never been without one. Theodore Roosevelt once said, "The habit of saving money, while it stiffens the will, also brightens the energies. If you would be sure that you are beginning right, begin to save." The boy whose interest in saving money has been kindled is on the right track. He has a great advantage over the boy who thinks he must spend every cent he can get his hands on. The best and easiest time to start saving is when money is scarce and comes hard. When it comes easy it goes the same way.
