THE FARMERS' FIGHT

While not quite up to the average, the expectation for the yield from Oregon crops, on a percentage basis, is greater than that for the nation as a whole. With this statement, made in the official department of agriculture forecast for Oregon, there is the accompanying mention of wages, showing that in this phase of production expense, the farmer is virtually back on a pre-war basis.

The farmer is apparently getting his chance to "come back." Although sharing in war time prosperity, he took more than his share of the reaction, and as was pointed out by a prominent Portland financier on a recent visit to Bend, it is because of this, the wide variance between the values of agricultural and manufactured products, that the period of readjustment has been rather a protracted one.

Farming costs have been coming down, however, and with the estimated yield for the nation as a whole below normal, it is only reasonable to expect that prices will advance somewhat, closing the gap still more between farm and factory interchange of values. The farmers who have had the grit and perseverance to fight it out during the hard times—and that means most of them—can now see prosperity ahead.

Just ahead of Forest Protection week. By presidential proclamation the dates have been set as April 16 to 22. To some it may seem a trifle early, but it should be recalled that the first fire on the Deschutes National forest for the year has already been recorded.

Indifference

The groundhog doesn't seem to care how often his predictions fail; he rests in comfort in his lair, and lets the hide go with the tail. On Groundhog Day the people cry, "The critter's shadow doesn't show! We may expect an azure sky, an end to winter and its snow." And so they welcome Gentle Spring before that season is on deck, and while they gambol, dance and sing, a blizzard swats them in the neck. The groundhog, from its lonely cave, beholds the tempest rear and scoot, and listens to the wild winds rave, and doesn't seem to care a hoot. And much I envy him his sense; I cannot shoo bad dreams away; I suffer agonies intense, when'er I've pulled a bonehead play. I'm tortured through the weary night by recollections of a time when I departed from the right and sprung a carnival of crime. I traded horses now and then when in the glowing flush of youth, and roundly soaked a lot of men who trusted that I told the truth. I've done a lot of graceless things, and not one sin can I forget; and in my consciousness there rings a voice that says, "You'll pay up yet!" For me there is no soothing balm, no comfort for my jaded soul; so I admire the groundhog's calm, as he sits gazing from his hole.
