destruction of the state plan. Pierce believes in a state monopoly of this business, he said, and hopes that the measure will be put on the ballot again soon, in a form which the people will not misunderstand.

Levens' Talk Dry

Pierce quoted figures on the rates of compensation in the states of the northwest, in which Washington, with a state monopoly, had much lower rates than any of the other states. Oregon with its state commission patronized by only a part of the industries ranking second.

W. S. Levens, state prohibition commissioner, made a brief talk, urging the business men to take into consideration the damage which is done if they smile at the prohibition law—damage just as great as if they robbed a house, he declared, in the influence which this attitude has on the younger generation. He urged cooperation with the sheriff's office and police in the control of bootlegging.

Secretary L. Antles of the club had urged the business men to report cases of begging and peddling to the commercial club or to the police, and Levens suggested that the bootlegger be added to that list.

Visitors introduced at the luncheon, in addition to those who spoke, were E. M. Wright and Ray Gerking, directors, and D. J. McLellan, manager of the Deschutes County Municipal Improvement district.

The governor is in Central Oregon for the purpose of addressing a meeting of the Pomona granite at Tumalo this afternoon. Levens accompanied him to Bend. They were met at the train this morning by Wright Gerking and McLellan, and the third member of the district directorate, Carl H. Hatch, and then taken on a tour of the Tumalo project before noon.

GERMAN LEADER SEEKING PEACE

New Move Made for Favor of Socialists

Hindenburg Spends First Night As President In Bismarck's Old Room

(U. P. Leased Wire to The Bend Bulletin) BERLIN, May 13.—President Hindenburg moved today to conciliate the socialists, whose opposition is feared as a stumbling block in the path of the new chief executive. The president received State Premier Brauns of Prussia in a special audience at the Wilhelmstrasse palace and conversed with him for some time. Brauns was a candidate for the presidency in the first election. Hindenburg was understood to be prejudiced against socialists, but to be desirous of obtaining their cooperation. After passing the night in the bedroom of the palace which formerly was occupied by Bismarck, Hindenburg began the day by receiving a deputation from the reichsrath, then followed representatives of the German provinces, to congratulate him upon his inauguration. Representatives of the Prussian government, including Brauns, arrived at the palace. The new chief executive is desirous of restoring the former outstanding influence of Prussia within the reich, hence he made a special point of courtesy to its representatives, although a majority of them were socialists.
