TONIGHT AND SATURDAY

Glee Club Director

Dating his membership in the glee club back to the year 1892, "Brick" Morse now leads the glee club in its 33rd season. After finishing a most successful college career, during which he not only took a leading part in musical affairs but found time to become the university's most famous athlete, being a member of the varsity baseball, football and track squads, Morse studied voice in New York during 1898-88. He continued his vocal training in Paris in 1909-10. He is the composer of several string quartets as well as some male quartets and also the composer of some of the most famous of the university's songs, "Hail to California" and "Sons of California" having been written by him.

Under Morse's direction the glee club will offer a program varying from snappy college songs to operatic selections. The program differs materially from those presented by other college glee clubs. Though one of the main features of the program is the vaudeville act, there are plenty of numbers of the classic type to balance up. Such composers as Mendelssohn, Gounod, Thayer, Wagner and Verdi are presented by the club. Then there are scores of peppy college songs, sung as only a college glee club can sing them. An unexcelled polish acquired during tours of the Orient and Europe, makes each act sparkling and pleasing entertainment. The club will be at the Capitol theater in Bend Monday and Tuesday.

DEFENSE PLANS INCLUDE WOMEN

Would Be Used As Non Combatant

War Department Seeks to Correct Errors In Recruiting Methods

By Ludwell Denny
 (United Press Staff Correspondent)
 WASHINGTON, May 29.—Organization of a woman's army service corps, regularly uniformed and enlisted, is being considered by the war department as an integral part of its permanent defense plans. Preliminary study and investigation of the proposal has been completed by the war college here.

Elaborate reports on the basis of questionnaires sent out by the general staff have been made by the corps area commanders. Under the present tentative plan non-combatant services engaged in by women during the world war will be coordinated and extended.

Use of women in actual fighting is not now contemplated. The two-fold object is, rather, to release soldiers now in non-combatant service for combat, and to increase the efficiency of the army.

Military occupations specified for women will include cooks, dietitians, nurses, welfare workers, clerks, telephone and telegraph operators, laundresses, matrons, tailors, post exchange workers and reclamation service employees.

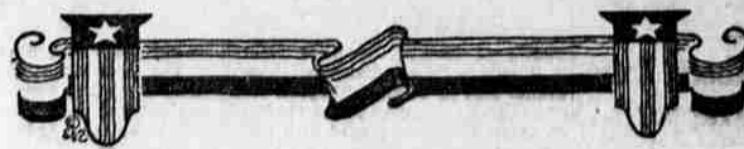

To Improve Recruiting
 A study of the 50,000 women serving with the United States army during the world war has revealed unsatisfactory methods of recruiting regulation and coordination, which the general staff is now trying to correct in its general mobilization plan.

In the new plan, the war experience of Great Britain has been found helpful, according to officers here in charge of the women's service. They point out that in 1917 the British war office directed the organization of the Women's Army Auxiliary corps—"Queen Mary's corps"—to substitute women for men in certain positions at home, at the bases and on the lines of communication overseas. This corps, which attained a strength of 250,000, was a part of the British army and functioned under army orders with the greatest efficiency and success.

Substitution of trained women cooks for inexperienced male regimental cooks materially increased the efficiency of the troops, it was proved.

Apart from such obvious occupations in which women can serve with the army, the general staff investigation includes a study of other branches hitherto engaged in only by men. Corps area commanders are carrying out tests to measure the relative efficiency of men and women in all non-combatant branches.

worker out, include the following:

Shall all women in military service, or only the part actually operating with troops, be an integral part of the army under military discipline and orders?

Shall women units be coordinated vertically under a women's corps for the entire army, or horizontally under existing military commands with which they are to be merged?

Is voluntary enlistment or selective draft and conscription the more effective method in recruiting women?

Should women officers be accepted solely on ground of technical proficiency in one profession, or be given a minimum of general military training enabling them to coordinate their respective branches with the entire military establishments in war time?

Shall the compensation of women be equal or less than for men in similar service?

To what extent will a combined male and female army create difficult housing and social problems and how to solve those difficulties?

While the war department is carefully feeling its way in many aspects of the problem, the general principle of wider and more scientific use of women in the army has been established.
