A DINNER PARTY
Chapter 82
While she saw that Frankie had his simple evening meal and was bathed and put to bed, Pan was naturally very curious about the talk in the other room. She had closed the door, of course, as she went out, but mother. Pan thought of breaking this habit tonight; she wanted to give Santley his chance alone with Gloria.

But children are creatures of habit.

"I always do say goodnight to her, and I'm going to now," Frankie said stoutly. "Besides I can say goodnight to Santley too. I like him rawther." Being an imitative monkey he had picked up the broad "a" of his new playmates and used their "rawther" on every occasion.

So in he went to the little living room that divided the two bedrooms and made up a cozy little hotel suite, and prolonged his goodnight with all the ingenuity only a six year old possesses.

One interruption! When he was in bed, as they had the same room. Pan had to return to the living room, or stay where she was—when Gloria that Frankie would stay awake. She decided he had better lose some sleep than have Gloria interrupted again. So she pulled a screen around his bed, and took as much time as possible folding and putting away his clothes. She couldn't find anything to do then but to dress herself for dinner, though she was sure she would dine alone that evening at the hotel while they went out.

Then Gloria opened the door.

"Clever little creature, aren't you?" she whispered. Then aloud, "Come along in, Santley waits us to dine with him."

"Oh—that's charming—I'm afraid I can't, though," Pan was a little to go on—I've said Frank was dead to me from the moment I left. That's why I couldn't go through the farce of wearing mourning—but no one expected it. Well, I've heard all about it now, the last five years of his life—and his death. Poor Frank!

She went into details. Frank Gates had become what all men of his type drift to—for they all seem alike. Sometimes he wrote and sold an article to a newspaper or magazine, he lived heaven knows where, in some dingy garret, he never took anyone home, so few knew where it was. He spent what he earned or had on nice clothes, he kept up one modest club, and borrowed money wherever he could, and drank more and more every month.

He went from one set of friends to another less desirable, and another less desirable than that. Finally Santley found him, sent him to a hospital, paid for him there for months and was with him when he died—he flickered out like the ragged end of a candle.

"And that's that," said Gloria, rising from her dressing table. "Let's get a taxi."

But as they entered the restaurant, Pan watched the amazing change that had taken place in three seconds in her friend. Gloria with slightly flushed cheeks and sparkling eyes, with her little head held as only she could hold it, walked smilingly to her table. She looked about 26.

Tomorrow—Watching.

Leave A Clean Camp and A Dead Fire!

Our prosperity, present and future, is based on the timber industry. See that it is not impaired through your personal carelessness.

The Weather Bureau reports increased fire danger for the next few days. This means increased vigilance on your part while on your vacation trip. Remember the camp fire that won't do any harm is like the gun that isn't loaded. It is the one that causes disaster.

LOOK OUT FOR SELF POISONING

Neglect of the liver results in self-poisoning! Not so quickly, perhaps, but just as surely as if you drank poison out of a bottle. If your liver is not doing its work of helping digestion, eliminating waste from the bowels and purifying the blood, you will always be troubled with sick headaches, nausea, biliousness, bad breath, gas, sour stomach, or constipation.

Cleanse and tone your liver! Put your system in condition so you feel your very best again! Try just a spoonful of Dr. H. S. Thacher's excellent Liver and Blood Syrup after the next few meals and notice the quick improvement in the way you eat, sleep, look and feel—the return of strength, vigor and energy. You will be completely satisfied; otherwise there will be no cost.
