THE WALL FLOWER

happiness than I ever thought would come to me," she told herself once. "Nothing else matters beside that."

"But when she and Frankie were taking a stroll one morning, she stopped before a shop window that displayed the conventional white satin and pearls and tulle. Frankie looked at the gown critically:

"Mother never wears that sort of thing," he observed and thereby condemned it and all like it. "Come on, Pan, there's a hurdy-gurdy up the street, do you think the bobby will let him play?"

George had returned from Paris Tuesday, when Pan had come back from the country. That night they had become engaged. "We'll be married this week," George had decreed.

Wednesday—this was Thursday—George came around with a license. Their names had to be "posted" a few days in a registry office, it appeared.

"We'll be married Saturday morning, and go off to some romantic little country town, they have good inns—and I'll get a maid for Frankie, so I can have a little of your company all to myself."

"Oh, are we all going away again?" asked the child, who overheard this.

"I'm going to marry Pan, you see," George explained.

"Oh!" Frankie was unimpressed. "Everybody's getting married. I'm glad I don't have to. When we get home, will we all live in your big studio, George—you and Pan and mother and Santley and me?"

His dark eyes regarded his friend with interest. "I like to play with your paint brushes," he added, by way of explanation for his eagerness.

"I don't think mother would approve of such a mixed family," George said indulgently. "But Pan will live there anyway."

"Oh no, mother won't let her leave me," said Frankie, with the air of one who knows all about it. So he refused to be troubled by these various upsets in his placid scheme of existence. He stood still long enough for Pan to straighten his always crooked tie, then went on with one of the innumerable games he often played with himself. George watched the deft fingers that smoothed the boy's hair and generally set him to rights.

"Just when I think you are such a child that I've no business to marry you," he observed, "you become so old and maternal that—"

"That you feel I ought to adopt you," Pan smiled. "But we must have witnesses at the wedding, mustn't we? Shall we go call on Mrs. Clarke and ask her?"

Mrs. Clarke was quite overwhelmed.

but no, you're not going to be married in a registry office—what nonsense! And no wedding cake or wedding gown, dear me, I shouldn't feel it was legal, somehow!

"And that brave little girl living by herself in a hotel and taking care of a child too. Will Gloria be back in time for the ceremony? You haven't told her? Dear me! Well, you're moving right over here, and you can't be married until next week at least and I'm going to help select the wedding gown. Yes, and the ceremony will be here—quiet as you please, but a civilized wedding, at least, with an officiating clergyman. Of course, and we'll keep Frankie until you come back—"

Tomorrow—Preparations.

Willing Is Eliminated In State Golf Tourney

(U. P. Leased Wire to The Bend Bulletin.)
PORTLAND, July 17.—Dr. O. F. Willing, most widely known of northwest golfers, and last year state champion of Oregon, is no longer a contestant for this year's state crown. Willing was eliminated Thursday by Claude Foote of Portland, five and four.

Rudolph Wilhelm and Frank Dolph of Portland, and C. D. Hunter of Tacoma, came through the third round with Foote and meet today in the semi-finals. Wilhelm paired with Dolph, and Foote matched with Hunter.

In the women's championship semi-finals today Mrs. L. W. Palmer of Portland plays Mrs. C. C. Cary of Seattle. Miss Frances Jacobs of Tualatin meets Mrs. C. W. Hamilton of Hood River.

AUTOS IN SMASH

Automobiles driven by C. F. Gaines and Eugene McDermott figured in a collision on the highway north of Bend Thursday. Both drivers reported to the Bend police, but the amount of damage was not mentioned in the reports.

When Mary Peterson took office as mayor of Red Cloud, Neb., three years ago, the financial affairs of the place were in a most deplorable condition. By applying the same common sense rules of business which had made her successful as proprietor of a large garage, "Mayor Mary" has succeeded in wiping out the entire public indebtedness of more than $100,000.

Utah claims that the first woman to cast a ballot in the United States was a piece of Brigham Young, when she voted in the Salt Lake City municipal election on February 21, 1870.

Julia Hoyt, New York society leader and hostess, has added designing of gowns and wraps to her list of talents. She has signed for a prominent firm of garment manufacturers.

Manda Howell has the distinction of being the only woman motion picture-director in America.
