SAYS BRYAN GETS MORE RIDICULOUS

Religious Issue Fogged In Absurdities, Claim

By Julian Huxley, M. A.
Senior Demonstrator of Zoology at Oxford University.

(Written for the United Press)
(Copyright, 1925, by the United Press)
OXFORD, England, July 24.—William Jennings Bryan's statements are getting more ridiculous.

He states that if evolution is true we ought not to eat beef or mutton because it means eating relatives.

He apparently minds eating animals if they are "relatives" even though so remote that the last common ancestor lived millions of years ago, but he has no scruples about eating what he believes to be the careful and treasured handiwork of a benevolent creator.

Much more important than such minor absurdity, however, is the general religious issue. Every religion must have its theology which in man's attempt to explain in rational terms the facts of nature and his own relations to them, to the powers behind them and to other men. When we find that old explanations cannot be true, we must cast them overboard or the religion associated with false theology becomes stagnant and moribund and will cease to play a part in the civilization of the day.

Most educated people find in evolutionary progress the mainstay for their beliefs. The evolutionist, whether Protestant or Catholic, Christian or agnostic, treasures the definite fact that evolution has brought about the slow ascent of life to ever higher forms.

This gives hope for the future and the assurance that nature is now alien or hostile but is moving in the same direction in which man himself has set his face.

In regard to immortality, the evolution theory neither asserts nor denies. At least it does not sacrifice to other worldliness the coming of the "kingdom of God" on earth.

Adopting an old proverb, the evolutionists say:
"Take care of this world and the next will take care of itself," but this means taking care of the spiritual life as well as of material conditions.

PARLIAMENT HEARS PLEA FOR INSECT

Flea Occasion for Eloquence in Lower House

(U. P. Licensed Wire to The Bend Bulletin)
LONDON, July 24.—"When is an insect not an insect?"

This is the question that is agitating London at this time; and the answer seems to be: "When it is a flea."

At any rate the matter of the flea interjected itself into a recent debate in the serious house of commons on the question of an act entitled the "Performing Animals Bill" and for 15 minutes the staid commoners rocked with laughter while Brigadier-General Cockrell who was in charge of the bill pleaded for the inclusion of the flea under the protective measures of the act.

Persistent Worker
"The flea," said General Cockrell, "is one of the most persistent and wonderful workers in the world, and one of its best performers. But because he is an invertebrate he is not protected under the benefits of this bill. I move for his inclusion under its protection."

There was no immediate seconding of the motion and General Cockrell continued: "I see he has no friends. Yet the flea can jump 20 times his own height and draw 40 times his own weight, and shows the greatest alacrity in rising from his place. I should think that that would commend him to the favor of the liberals."

Independent
"Furthermore he is absolutely independent of the capitalist and requires no machinery, and that should endear him to the socialists. Again I move for the inclusion of the flea under the performing animals bill."

But the liberals and the socialists failed to rally to the flea's support and the motion was lost.
Discussion of the cyclostome, an invertebrate, which from some constitutional defect was unable to keep its mouth shut was also occasional for much laughter, but here again—possibly because of its constitutional defect—the invertebrates failed of friends in the house, and the motion for its protection under the bill was also lost.

Despondent Woman Dives From Sixth Story Window

(U. P. Licensed Wire to The Bend Bulletin)
NEW YORK, July 24.—Despondent, apparently because of ill health, Mrs. Peyton J. Van Rensselaer of Newport, R. I., a member of one of America's oldest families, pinned some treasured pieces of jewelry to her clothing next to her heart and threw herself from a sixth story window near Fifth avenue.

YOUR HEALTH

CANCER CURES

As far back as 1902, a worker at the Rockefeller institute succeeded in finding, in many cases of cancer, an extremely small germ; so small, in fact, that it could not be seen directly under the strongest magnification of a microscope. Recently, in England, more work has been done along this line, and the findings have been confirmed. In other words, a very small organism seems to occur fairly regularly in cases of cancer.

Whether this germ is the cause of cancer, it is still impossible to say. It might be; or it might have something to do with the real cause; or it might be something entirely secondary, which appears only after the cancer has started. Much more work will have to be done before these questions can be at all definitely settled.

In the meanwhile, even though this organism should be found to be the cause, we would only be one step farther in our knowledge of cancer. We will have no new light whatever on the treatment of this ailment. Cancer, however, like tuberculosis, is a widespread disease, and many people are interested in anything which looks as though it might afford a hope for cure. Therefore, with the publicity which has been given the discovery of this germ, it will be odd if a number of cancer "cures" do not spring up which will seize on this pretext to sell their harmful wares to the helpless victim.

For all so called "cancer cures" are harmful. Even if they do not make the condition worse, the delay caused by their use permits many a cancer to reach a stage where nothing can be done with it. The medical profession would be only too glad to welcome some real cure of cancer other than surgery, but this so far is an unrealized dream. No doubt, it will come true in time. At present, the only hope of cure for cancer is removal at the earliest possible moment, usually by the knife; and everything that delays this removal lessens the patient's chances of getting well.

The best advice that can be given now is this: For every growing lump, unhealing sore or persistent bleeding, consult a reputable physician at once. More than that, have a regular, thorough examination once a year. If the physician finds cancer, and advises its removal, do not delay! Above all, do not try "cancer cures"—they are all useless, and merely give the patient a false sense of security, while the cancer rapidly becomes hopeless. Once a better cure than surgery is discovered, it will immediately be widely known and universally employed. Unfortunately, there are many who are willing to capitalize humanity's persistent hopefulness, and cause untold misery, by exploiting worthless "cures" for the sake of the money.
