Little Chance of Spread, Governors Note

Free Progress of Education Must Not be Hampered Is General Idea

(Copyright 1925 by United Press)
 With uncertainty existing as to who will step into William Jennings Bryan's place as champion of fundamentalism when the Scopes case reaches the Tennessee supreme court, there is little prospect of new anti-evolution legislation in other legislatures.

Telegrams to the United Press from governors of many states indicated some were prepared to block any movement to restrict education. The death of the great Commoner, however, coupled with the intense, widespread interest created in evolution by the Scopes trial, assures vast discussion of the subject in coming legislative sessions.

Governor George H. Dern of Utah said that while he knew of no contemplated legislation prohibiting the teaching of evolution, he would "disapprove any legislation invading religious liberty or freedom of thought."

No anti-evolution bill has appeared in Nevada, but Governor J. G. Scruggs has very decided ideas on the subject.

"I will say that I consider the legislators and people of Nevada too sensible to hamper the free progress of education by any intolerant legislation," he said.

State Regulation Distiked
 "We will have a more perfect state of civil liberty when the state ceases to regulate and restrict the search for truth," said John J. Blaine, governor of Wisconsin. "William Lecky, the Irish patriot and publicist, said: 'Few people do more mischief in the world than those who are perpetually inventing crimes. They lose all sense of proportion and perspective in morals, and those who are always straining at gnats are often peculiarly apt to swallow camels.'"

"Zealousness in creating sin by legislation is evidence of decay and degeneracy. We can speak with complacency and pride only when substantive law decrees against injury to another instead of punishing mere disobedience under mandates of absolutism and prohibition."

"Faith, hope and charity will cease to be cardinal virtues when legislation decrees against the search for truth. Society should not be made the scapegoat of fanaticism."

Governor Ralph O. Brewster of Maine said:

"We have no information in Maine as to the presentation of bills regarding evolution. Maine feels that this has been a good deal of a tempest in a teapot."

New Hampshire also took the Scopes trial with something of a grain of salt, according to H. C. Pearson, secretary to the governor.

Trial Doesn't Worry
 "This state is not very excited about the Scopes case," Pearson said. "We have been too busy entertaining vacation visitors."

Governors of Georgia, Oregon and Washington stated they did not care to commit themselves until the question was presented them in the form of a bill. None had heard that any such bill was contemplated.

Governor Pothier of Rhode Island

any bills prohibiting teaching of evolution in the schools will be introduced.

Governor Baker of Missouri declined to say whether he would or would not sign a measure prohibiting the teaching of evolution should one be enacted.

Other states whose governors reported no knowledge of anti-evolution measures included Arizona, Minnesota, New York, Maryland and Arkansas.

Road Map Is Received For Distribution Here

Strip maps of automobile roads from The Dalles to Redmond, Prineville and Bend and of The Dalles-California highway south from Bend to Klamath Falls have been received at the Bend branch of the Oregon State Motor association.

The motor association's strip map of the highways from The Dalles to the Bend country lists both the Sherman county highway and The Dalles-California highway. No preference is given by the motor association to either road.

The map of the highway from Bend to Klamath Falls also shows the Century drive road, which leads from Bend into the heart of the mid state Cascades. The road leading from The Dalles-California to East lake is also shown.

honor the choice of the Argonauts

The Western pioneer was an exacting person. Whether he lived in camp, or in one of the few settlements of the early Fifties, he had certain demands which must be met. One of these was for good coffee,—and he got it.

But the Western pioneer was not a quiet person. When he liked something he didn't mind saying so. That's why the fame of Folger's Coffee, Tea and Spices reached the folks back home. From the North, East and South came calls for Folger Products. So great were the demands that despite the continuous expansion of the pioneer Folger plant at San Francisco, it became necessary to establish a second plant at Kansas City, Mo., then a branch at Dallas, Texas.

As we this year celebrate our Diamond Jubilee—along with that of the State of California—it is a satisfaction to know that the growth of our business is traceable to the approval placed on Folger products by our first customers—the Argonauts. These early settlers liked quality and they found it in Folger Products. And this holds good today. It is because of their unusual quality that Folger Products are now sold in 29 states.

So when you buy a package bearing the Folger name, you know you are getting a product which has back of it the experience of 75 years. Coffee and Tea packed in vacuum (Folger's is the original vacuum packed tea,) Spices, the finest the world's markets afford, and Extracts which have been household favorites for three generations.

Is it any wonder we ask you to make the Folger Test? We ask it because we know that the best coffee, tea, spices and extracts will always win. We've seen it happen for 75 years.
