

POLAR FLIGHT STORY IS TOLD

Ellsworth Hopes for Another Attempt

Holds Dirigible Better Than Planes for Venture, He Says On Arrival

(U. P. Leased Wire to The Bend Bulletin) NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—The fame that was Lincoln Ellsworth's when he was missing near the north pole with the Amundsen expedition and immediately afterward when he was declared a hero of that exploit, has proved strangely transitory. When Ellsworth stepped from the Frederick VIII today, the only greeting he received, aside from that of newspapermen, was extended by the acting Norwegian consul general.

The American explorer, who financed in part the Amundsen attempt to fly to the pole and who was greeted with tremendous ovations when the party returned to Norway, expressed pleasure at being back on his native soil.

"But I left my heart back in the northland," he said. "I am going to join with Roald Amundsen in another attempt to fly to the north pole and the next time I don't think we will fail."

In good health and bearing the marks of wind and sun and the lines about the eyes that stamp the explorer, the Ohioan said plans for the next polar flight would not be long delayed, but would be formulated when Amundsen arrives here September 8.

"I hope the same men who went with us on the last trip will be along on the next," Ellsworth said.

The explorer expressed hope that his plans would include the use of a dirigible, for he believes a lighter

SOLDIER AT 3 MONTHS

John Stephen Tillman, now four months old, seen here in the lap of his father, Lieut. Stephen Tillman, is the youngest member of the Citizens' Training camps, having been enrolled when he was three months old. He will train in the camps in 1942. Baby Tillman is a kinsman of Brig. Gen. Samuel E. Tillman, former commandant of West Point, and of the late Senator Ben Tillman.

than air craft stands the best chance of reaching the top of the world.

"It may prove too expensive, however, he added. "The last trip cost us $150,000."

He contributed more than half of this amount.

Three events during the latest polar flight attempt made the most impression upon him, Ellsworth said.

"The first time was when we rode for three hours through the fog, surrounded by rainbows in a double circle with the shadow of our plane in the center, seeing nothing else but the gray wall all around us, steering by magnetic compass for Spitzbergen.

The second was when I felt our plane lift from the ice into which it had been frozen. If it had not gotten off we should have perished.

"The third thrill was the reception accorded us at Oslo," he concluded, standing in the sunshine on the dock at Hoboken, with only the acting consul general of Norway and the reporters around him, looking across the Hudson at the skyline of New York, which two months ago was a thrill day and night when he and his companions were lost in the north.

The woman was so grieved at the time she went to escort the corpse home she did not view it, she told police authorities here today.

Mrs. Long came to Sacramento to find William Keller, who worked with Dwyer in Truckee. Keller will return to San Francisco with her and attempt to identify the body.

The whereabouts of the real John Dwyer are unknown.

FLORAL MOUNTAIN IS MARKING GRAVE

Will of Commoner to be Offered for Probate

(U. P. Leased Wire to The Bend Bulletin) WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—A mound of flowers today marked the spot where William Jennings Bryan lies buried in the heights of Arlington.

Scores of magnificent floral tributes, from giant set pieces to simple bunches of sweet peas and roses, were heaped high around his grave.

Hundreds of visitors went to the new shrine among many shrines in the national cemetery.

The last rites were said over the commoner late yesterday in the brilliant rays of the afternoon sun, which broke through the clouds and rain that had shrouded the city all day.

Mrs. Bryan, who had not looked on the face of her husband in death, did not witness the interment. With her son, William Jennings Bryan, Jr., she sat in a limousine a score of yards away weeping, while the clergyman intoned "dust to dust" and a sexton filled the grave.

Later perhaps a big monument will be erected at the spot to proclaim the burial place of the commoner.

Mrs. Bryan has made no plans yet. She intends eventually to prepare her husband's memoirs for publication. She will rest here a few days and then perhaps return to Miami, where Bryan's will will be offered for probate.

President Sends Son to U. S. Training Camp

(U. P. Leased Wire to The Bend Bulletin) SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., Aug. 1.—John Coolidge, 19, is off today for the citizens' military training camp at Camp Devens, Mass., with a pointed tip from his father to keep out of the newspapers.

A president's son has a pretty hard time—much more so than ordinary boys, chiefly because the publicity attending his activities causes his doings to be limited. Coolidge has told callers that his son, John, is just as easy to spoil as the usual run of boys and easier than some.

John has not the opportunities for companionship that other boys have. In his 19 day visit at the summer White House, he has only his parents, the secret service men and marines on guard as companions. His only chance to live his own natural life, in his father's opinion, is to mingle without distinction in the democratic existence of the training camp and this fall with his classmates at Amherst college.

Consul advices said the trouble started during payment of wages, the workers attacking and the company replying with rifle fire.

Students captured one of the British and took him to the Southeastern university, while other Britishers sought refuge on a warship which landed an armed guard.

Just who will start on the mound for the Bend team is still problematical, but it is believed that the veteran Tetherow will have that honor. There is a possibility that Dick Young will be here in uniform.

The lineup of the visitors is not known, but according to rumor, they are coming to Bend with a group of players who will give the local nine a real battle.

The Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators has voted to hold a convention in Montreal, beginning September 7.

Announcement of his purchase of the American Bakery from Louis Dornecker was made today by Lucas Kruse. He is taking over the business following a trip to Portland in which he ordered new equipment to be used in the manufacturing and display of bakery products.

The entire storeroom, half of which is now occupied by the Zenith cafe, will be used hereafter, says Kruse, and the manufacturing establishment on Newport avenue will also be retained. The name of the business is to be changed to the Bend Bakery and the bread which it makes and sells will be christened "Best Yet."

Six people in all will be employed at the Bend Bakery, says Kruse. He invites inspection by patrons and others.

Wrong Body In Casket Found at Journey End

(U. P. Leased Wire to The Bend Bulletin) SACRAMENTO, Cal., Aug. 1.—After completing a journey from Truckee to her home in San Francisco with a casket which she believed contained the body of her brother, John Dwyer, Mrs. L. Long discovered there had been a mistake.

Although the dead man had given his name as Dwyer and told his Truckee employers to notify Mrs. Long in case of death, Mrs. Long declares the body is not that of her brother.

The woman was so grieved at the time she went to escort the corpse home she did not view it, she told police authorities here today.

Mrs. Long came to Sacramento to find William Keller, who worked with Dwyer in Truckee. Keller will return to San Francisco with her and attempt to identify the body.

A STANDARD FOR THE PEOPLE

Millions now living will never die

After six thousand years of effort man points proudly to our present-day civilization as the acme of his attainments. A civilization stooping to brutalities too inhuman for savages, makes the standards of Christianity but empty and hollow professions.

From this hypocrisy there is a tearing away. A spirit of lawlessness flouts laws and customs with an abandonment that does not stop to consider the consequences, so persistent are the attempts for release. But what new standards—social, political, and religious—are to succeed the present?

In the fulfillment of prophecies, so marked at the present time, there is outlined a program that was foretold in the Bible, a standard that promises adoption, because present troubles were foretold as shaping the Standard for the People.
