CHANGING THE SUBJECT

Run down by a truck or lorry, Jinks was flat upon his back, and I said, "I'm mighty sorry," when I visited his shack. "It is beastly," I continued, "that you have a broken wing, that your legs, so nobly sinewed, must be carried in a sling. It is sad to see you suffer, and when you are out of pain you should prosecute the duffer who was driving that old wain. All your anguish should be paid for, there's a remedy, I wist; that is what the law is made for, that is why the courts exist." "I am busted up at present, but," said Jinks, in accents low, "let us talk of something pleasant, let's forget all grief and woe. All my friends come to me springing sympathy till they are bored, for the dicky birds are singing and there's sunshine out of doors. I can hear the motors chooing down the street the livelong day; happy people are pursuing pleasure in a seemly way. Life to them is most amusing, I can hear their laugh and wheeze; when we talk of wounds we're losing all such cheery sounds as these. I can hear the children playing, whooping on the village green; as I listen I am straying back again to sweet sixteen; once again I'm busy making mud pies with my childhood friends; if we talk of spres and aching, all the sweet illusion ends." What's the use, I ask, of trying to condeole with men like this? They'll discover, when they're dying, some excuse for perfect bliss.

Source of true help:—My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth. Psalm 121:2.

IT CAN NOT PAY Less than two weeks ago three Oregon convicts left the penitentiary at Salem. The price of their freedom was the lives of two guards, and of a fellow convict who had helped plot the escape. Hunted like beasts, every man's hand against them, a price upon their heads—this was the sort of freedom bought with the death of Oregon Jones and Guards Holman and Sweeney. But the brief taste of liberty which Tom Murray, Ellsworth Kelly, and James Willos gained was not paid for in full. It will not be until the three are cut down from the gallows and the prison physician officially announces them dead. This will be the payment which the law exacts, and today in three solitary cells the returned prisoners await the time when the noose will be adjusted and the trap sprung beneath their feet. A few scant days of freedom for this. It is not our purpose to gloat over these men, doomed by their own acts. Their race is nearly run. What good to ask them, "Does it pay?" But—to some there is the element of romance about all this sordid episode. Murry and his followers win actual admiration for eluding the posies that swarmed the Waldo hills, gain sympathy because their capture was effected through treachery. In the eyes of impressionable folk three bloodthirsty outlaws became heroes. "I was hoping they'd get away", is a remark you may hear here in Bend, and from highly respectable people, too. Granted, the exploit had its spectacular features, but nothing that required any high order of intellect. The fact that the attempt was made in the first place by men not imprisoned for capital crimes is more an indication of low mentality. Bravery? Yes, the desperation of the cornered rat, and the rat's scurrying flight when once the danger becomes a little less pressing. But let those who must give the emotions free rein for a moment; glorify Murry, Kelly and Willos into high minded, courageous rebels against an oppressive, misunderstanding order of society. Then, let them stop and really think for a moment—let them picture the three graves which marked the beginning of the adventure, let them picture the three more which will mark the end, let them picture the heart broken mother and father of Tom Murray—then let them return an answer to the question, "Does it pay?"

In the August number of "Oregon Business", official publication of the state chamber of commerce, we read that Grants Pass is to entertain the state editorial association meeting "last July". There is other reliable, important and up-to-the-minute news in the issue.

A Chicago firm wants to know if we intend to publish the names of local income tax-payers. This firm wants these names and the amount of the tax paid. It will get these names from all over the country and then the sale of gold bricks will be undertaken.

President of Factory Admits He Was Thief

(U. P. Leased Wire to The Bend Bulletin) DAYTON, O., Aug. 24.—Free C. Nicholls, president of the Nicholls Manufacturing company confessed to police today that he was the "blue phantom" bandit who robbed the North Dayton branch of the Dayton Savings and Trust company of $28,000.

A squad of patrolmen rushed to Nicholls' $40,000 mansion and found $21,000 of the loot cached in a new garage back of the house. The branch bank was held up on August 12 by a man garbed in a long blue robe and wearing a blue mask.

In a written confession Nicholls said he staged the hold up because he was in financial straits, police said. Nicholls' foster daughter, Miss Helen Sammet, was one of the seven bank employes Nicholls locked in the bank vault the day of the robbery.

Man Thought Not Sane Sets Fire to Bedding

(U. P. Leased Wire to The Bend Bulletin) GOLDENDALE, Wash., Aug. 24.—John McKernan, 39, held in jail here for an examination as to his sanity, set fire to the bedding about 2 a. m. today.

When Sheriff W. S. Warwick opened the jail door, the man made a dash for liberty and escaped momentarily. He ran into a house and crawled under a bed in which Lee Darland and his wife were sleeping. Darland dragged McKernan from under the bed. Sheriff Warwick arrived in time to join in a fight which ensued. Darland and Warwick could not subdue the man until Martin Spalding, husky member of the volunteer fire department, arrived and assisted them.

SECURITY PACT REPLY IS SENT

Conference Is Expected to Follow Soon

Allies Seek to Have Germany's Application In by September Session

(U. P. Leased Wire to The Bend Bulletin) BERLIN, Aug. 24.—France's answer to the last German note on the question of the proposed allied German security pact was delivered today to Foreign Minister Strossmann by French Ambassador De Margerie. The envoy accompanied the delivery with an oral conference with Strossmann.

The answer is expected to pave the way to a conference of responsible chiefs of the governments concerned.

The allies have been desirous of having Germany apply for admission into the league of nations at the September session. It was contended following the Briand-Chamberlain conference in London recently that this application could be made, if a "get together" session of government leaders could be arranged quickly.

Recent dispatches from Germany have pictured Wilhelmstrasse as somewhat impatient of the delay in delivery of the note and the reported desire of the French government to have the text of the note withheld for a few days after delivery.
