An unusual feature of the service at the Baptist church Sunday evening was the address of Mrs. E. D. Cannady, editor of the Advocate, devoted to the interests of the colored people of the Pacific northwest.

Nearly all present day evil may be traced to religious prejudice, racial prejudice or political prejudice, the colored woman declared in an address delivered with unusual perfection of style and expression.

In spite of the fact that the negro in America is an unwelcome guest, brought here by force to reclaim the south from a wilderness, he is still intimidated and humiliated even in Oregon, said Mrs. Cannady.

The Oregon constitution still prohibits the bringing of free negroes into the state, denies them the right to own property and the right of suffrage. This provision was nullified by the 14th amendment to the federal constitution, but it is still a part of Oregon's laws, and is printed in recent volumes. A measure which would remove this section from the state constitution will be voted on at the next election, and Mrs. Cannady asked support for it.

After reciting some of the humiliations which the colored people in America face, Mrs. Cannady gave a contrasting picture of their accomplishments in many fields, and declared that the white man has done much for the negro since he brought him in chains from interior Africa; but that the negro, too, has done for the white man more than money can repay.

At about the same time that an entire negro regiment was receiving the croix de guerre for bravery in the Artois, negroes in America were being lynched, said Mrs. Cannady.

Better understanding between the races, coupled with universal extension of the Christian spirit, was the only solution for the problem that the speaker offered.

Deputy Sheriffs George Stokoe and L. A. W. Nixon went there with a warrant for the arrest of "Punk" Robertson and Ralph Whaley. They didn't find those gentlemen, but while in the house, Nixon's attention was drawn by the school of cats, and he found that their bed was a sack—and inside that sack were cow hides, stripped so that no brands could be discovered. He testified in justice court at McKinley's hearing today.

Stokoe returned to Bend and secured a search warrant, and in the subsequent search a second sack was found, containing the hide with the EG brand, that of Edward Gould, who has since that time signed the complaint charging McKinley with theft of a two year old steer, the charge being based on the finding of this branded hide.

Before the hearing this afternoon, Justice E. D. Gilson denied the motion of Bert C. Boylan, McKinley's attorney, for suppression of the hide as evidence, claiming that it was discovered in an illegal search.

Discretion to be Used In Enforcing New Law

(U. P. Leased Wire to The Bend Bulletin)

SALEM, Aug. 31.—Although the new automobile lighting law of Oregon becomes effective tomorrow, it is not expected that any attempt toward its rigid enforcement will be made until all car owners have been given a reasonable time to comply with the requirements.

The law is similar to the California law, requiring state inspected and focussed lights. One rigidly fixed spotlight is optional.

"We expect to use the same common sense in enforcing this law as we apply to the enforcement of all traffic laws," was the only statement T. A. Rafferty, chief of the state traffic squad, in response to a query as to the department's attitude toward the enforcement of the law.

Although today was supposed to be the last day of grace in which car owners could comply with the regulations, it was estimated that only about 10 per cent of the automobiles in the state have so far been inspected.

Want Property Returned
 After Apartment Raid

(U. P. Leased Wire to The Bend Bulletin)

PORTLAND, Aug. 31.—Charging that police overstepped in raiding the apartment here of Frank W. Keeler, president of the Rogue River Water works of Grants Pass, and seizing evidence, a petition was filed in Presiding Judge Tucker's court today for Keeler by John F. Logan, his attorney, asking the return of all property taken in the raid.

Keeler and John A. Roth, vice president of the water works company, were charged recently with violating the Oregon blue sky law through alleged sale of corporate securities without a license. The arrest and present investigation by the grand jury is in connection with the Orance bond deal.

Word Still Considers Accepting Warden Job

PORTLAND, Aug. 31.—Tom Word, former sheriff of Multnomah county and until recently an investigator for the department of justice, today still had under consideration the appointment proffered by Governor Pierce to become warden of the Oregon state penitentiary. He expects to arrive at a definite conclusion Tuesday.
