

Single Kick Breaks Jinx, Brings Victory To Bend Eleven

2 TOUCHDOWNS IN WHOLE GAME

Teams Stronger Than Early In Last Year

The difference between a goal that was converted after a touchdown, and another that was missed, gave the Bend high school a 7 to 6 victory over Redmond in the big Bend day football game at Redmond Saturday and upset the six year "jinx" that has kept Bend from winning on Redmond's gridiron.

That difference may seem slight and "fluky," but Bend has in Loomis a dropkicker who is reliable, and Redmond's lack of such a player spelled defeat.

Bend scored in the second quarter after penalties for holding had spoiled several previous marches down the field which Redmond seemed unable to stop. The touchdown was made by Ballantyne, who bucked the ball over from the four yard line after O'Brien, Bend's outstanding ground gainer, had made the most of the yardage to place it there.

Near the end of the first quarter, O'Brien had circled left end for 22 yards, getting the ball into Redmond's territory. An exchange of punts, one of which was returned by Loomis eight yards, a pass to O'Brien for 14, and two plunges by Ballantyne and O'Brien put the ball where Ballantyne could force it across the goal line.

Redmond's touchdown followed a freak play in which a forward pass was juggled by three men and then carried to the four yard line. Burdick then bucked it across. This occurred in the third quarter after King had returned a punt 20 yards to the 24 yard line.

Statistics of the game give Bend the advantage in the first half by a big margin, and Redmond a lesser margin in the second half. For a total, Bend made 234 yards from scrimmage and Redmond only 131; but Redmond, having in King a better punter than Bend could produce, largely made up for this difference. In fact, Redmond's end on the punting, caused to some extent the difference in yardage from scrimmage, for they frequently punted on first down.

Bend made eight first downs to none for Redmond, in the first half; in the second half Redmond made first down seven times to Bend's two. This makes it apparent that Redmond's team had not found itself in the first half, and also that it played a waiting game and hoped to win on endurance, which has been a big factor in Redmond's victories in the annual game many times in the past.

This strategy came near turning the trick, for Bend's goal was threatened throughout a great share of the later periods.

Both teams were obviously stronger than in the opening game last year, Redmond having one of the heaviest eleven seen here in recent years, combined with considerable speed, while Bend had the driving offensive which it lacked a year ago, and a defense as good as that which Coach James C. Riney had evolved at that time.

This offensive is built largely around O'Brien, who made 112 yards in running from scrimmage, and a lot more after receiving passes. His nearest rival was Bushnell, Redmond halfback, who made 29 yards from scrimmage. King gained 21 yards in this manner and Ballantyne 15. King returned punts for a total of 86 yards, and Loomis 50.

Forward passes were used effectively on both sides. Bend completed four passes out of seven for 43 yards, and Redmond completed seven out of 15 for 69 yards; but three of its passes were intercepted by Bend.

Redmond's defense was weak in the first half, but Coach Borden Beck apparently did something to stiffen it up between halves. Considering the weight it opposed, Bend's defense was admirable throughout. Outstanding defensive players for Bend were Ballantyne, Brink and Rae, and for Redmond, Hansen, McDonald and Lundberg.

First Quarter

Redmond won the toss and chose to receive at the north end of the field. Loomis kicked off at 3:03 o'clock, 30 yards to Schumacher, who returned 10. King punted 40 yards out of bounds. Ballantyne punted 30 yards and King returned 10.

King gained two yards and punted 42 to Loomis, who returned 12. O'Brien went around left end for 38 yards. Ballantyne gained two yards. Shall failed to gain. O'Brien made six and Ballantyne two.

Shall lost a yard. Loomis made 14 but Bend was penalized 15 for holding. Ballantyne punted 22 yards. King lost a yard and punted 40, Loomis returning 10.

Ballantyne made a yard. O'Brien eight and Ballantyne two. Bend was penalized 15 yards, and Ballantyne's punt was blocked and recovered by Redmond on Bend's 25 yard line.

Lundberg gained two yards. Bushnell two and Lundberg two, but Redmond was penalized 15. King made two yards and punted over the goal

By Williams Surprises From Players Likely In World Series

Yankee Castoff May be Star for Washington, Along With Others Who Refuse to Stay In Discard

(By United Press Leased Wire to The Bend Bulletin)
NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—World's series history presents numerous examples of players who became heroes over night and the glory may go this year to another unsung star who has never had his chance.

"Don't overlook Alec Ferguson when you're fixing up your dope," a veteran American league umpire said recently.

"A lot of critics have forgotten that he is with the Washington club, but if I don't miss my guess he will never be forgotten after the series. All he needs is a chance and Bucky Harris surely will give it to him."

When the youthful Washington manager announced the rotation in which he expected to work his pitchers against the Pittsburgh Pirates he named Ferguson after Walter Johnson, Stan Coveleskie and Dutch Reuther and it seems quite certain that he will get his chance.

Ferguson is a member of a celebrated group of Yankee castoffs with the Senators that include Roger Peckinpaugh, Muddy Ruel and Everett Scott. Miller Huggins sent him up the river to Boston without giving him much of a chance to make good and he didn't have enough behind him with the Red Sox to make good when he got the chance.

Bucky Harris then picked him up, gave him some soft words and a couple of licks on the back and the castoff made good just as Reuther and Coveleskie did when they found out that someone wanted them.

If Ferguson lives up to expectations, the Senators may not miss Coveleskie so badly if the Pole pulls up with a lame back as is reported.

In making the announcement that Johnson would pitch the opening game, it was apparent that Harris has hopes that he can use the big fellow in three games and no doubt he expects him to do better than he did in his first two starts against the New York Giants last fall.

Bill McKechnie has not announced definitely in what order he will use his Pittsburgh pitchers, but it is a safe guess that he will use Lee Meadows and Vic Aldridge as his one-two pitchers.

COLLEGE BALL GETTING START

Conference Elevens In Action For First Time

(U. P. Leased Wire to The Bend Bulletin)
College football took a real start in the Pacific northwest today, where several of the big conference teams were to be seen in action for the first time.

The most significant game on the schedule was at Missoula, Mont., between Montana and Washington State college. Washington State college, which rose from the depths at the first of last season to a creditable finish, has much of the same team back this year. Montana may prove to be formidable before the season is over, as critics say the Montanans are speedy.

Coach Dick Smith is sending out his University of Oregon team for the first game of the season against the Multnomah club of Portland at Eugene. This is Smith's first season and first game of his new regime, and critics will watch closely to see what power he shows.

The Oregon Agricultural college at Corvallis got its first test of football with the Aggies matched against Willamette this afternoon. Willamette was beaten 108 to 0 by Washington last week, so today's score at Corvallis was not expected to have much significance, although the new Aggie team will be seen in action.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 3.—West Point coaches made a last minute change in the team that will open the season today against the University of Detroit. Hammack, a heavy guard, will replace Seeman, and Tiny Higgett will do the kicking. Harding will play quarter and run the team.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Oct. 3.—The University of Idaho had a hard time beating Anse Cornell's eleven from the College of Idaho yesterday, and finally got away with the game by the narrow margin of 16 to 14. Regent, Idaho quarterback, was the outstanding figure of the game.
