Promise Fulfilled

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, 2nd, promised her wealthy husband, both pictured here, that when their daughters were married she would grant him a divorce. Murrill is now Mrs. Frederick C. Murrill, and Connelio is now Mrs. Earl E. T. Smith. And their parents' divorce by the Paris courts, where suit was instituted some time ago, is said to be imminent. If the decree is granted, Vanderbilt, it is reported, will marry Mrs. Barclay Warburton, Jr., this summer.

The shooting party. Fallia's dog brushed against some wet paint on the wall of a little oil station owned by Joseph Mancho. Mancho chased the dog away and Fallia became enraged. He rushed to a nearby hardware store and purchased a gun and shells. Fallia killed Mike Phons while shooting his way up the city's main street. Later he barricaded himself in his house and when national guardsmen riddled the front and back of his house he rushed to the back and shot it out with Constable R. L. Rasmussen. Both fell dead.
