Tells Baby Good-Bye "The time I was most deeply moved during all this affair," said Ray...

Met Wife's Father First "Would you like to ask me any questions about my wife?" Ray asked during a brief lull in the conversation...

Well, we were working in the woods and we met her father first. He is a timber cruiser. I got to be friends with him a long time before I knew he had a daughter...

Oh, about three months. "Denies Death Threat The twins were asked if they had given out a statement to the effect that if they had been arrested at the time of their arrest they would have shot it out with the officers rather than be taken alive..."

"I tell you what was the trouble," Ray explained, "I did not want any more publicity than Oregon and bring the baby. He said he did not know whether she wanted to come. He hasn't received any letters from her since the sheriff took him away from Steubenville..."

He explained that he and his brother had so little money and the trip was so expensive he didn't know about her coming out. "We didn't have much time to talk about it," he said. "When I saw her in jail we were so busy talking about winding up our business affairs and, besides, she was so badly torn up over it we couldn't talk much..."

When asked how long it had been since they had seen the mother, Ray said, "Oh, a long, long time." During the interview Ray asked the jailer for a cuspidor and, in lieu of one, the jailer spread paper on the floor. Roy chewed tobacco vigorously all the while...

Received No Letters Ray said he had not made up his mind yet whether or not he wanted his wife to come out to

I could help on account of my wife living back there and we refused to talk to reporters and I guess they just made up anything they wanted to, on account of that."

He said it was the same way about the report that they had confessed. Somebody jumped to the conclusion when they admitted identity, he explained.

The twins agreed readily to tell how they happened to be captured. They talked back and forth during this narrative, one telling part and the other telling part, and Roy occasionally correcting Ray and Roy asking for confirmation. Ray did most of the talking.

Worked in Woods They worked two years in the country around Ohio. Most of the time they were in the timber near Hanging Rock. They were out on a rural free delivery route and never got in to the post-office and none of their friends or acquaintances ever got to the postoffice, where they could see posters. Then they took a job at Hanging Rock, tearing down a furnace stack close to the post-office, a short while before going to Steubenville. One day Roy went in to the postoffice and saw the circular.

"It was that second circular," Ray said, "and it was a good one. Roy was struck right away with the excellent likenesses of us. They must have been talking to friends to get such good descriptions. The postoffice was not any bigger than these two cells and it had four windows and was light as day. Everyone that came in had to stick his face right into the posters almost when getting mail. They couldn't help seeing them. About a month before the arrest Roy saw the circular—Isn't that right, Roy? He told me, and I said that was the worst menace to our freedom so far. We decided not to go away but to wait a while and take a chance on arrest. "Hope for Acquittal "We knew we had a good chance of being acquitted. We knew they didn't have much evidence on us. I could not take my wife and baby because we didn't have enough money and I didn't want to leave them. We decided to wait until I could get enough money to take them. I just could not run away from them. And it was impractical to try to take them then. "Then somebody must have recognized the posters and told the department of justice officials in Columbus."
