

GOVERNORS IN SESSION TODAY

Three State Executives Will Confer

Vic Meyers Gets Chance to Pose in Superior's Chair at Olympia

Portland, Ore., Apr. 21.—(AP)—The governors of Oregon, Idaho and Washington, were to meet here this afternoon to discuss the mutual advantages of development of the Columbia and Snake rivers.

Governor C. Ben Ross of Idaho arrived here early today by train, and Governor Clarence D. Martin of Washington flew from Olympia this afternoon.

Governor Julius L. Meier of Oregon was host to the visitors.

The conference was arranged by the Columbia Valley association.

Olympia, Wash., Apr. 21.—(AP)—No band blared, no flags flew nor silk toppers appeared today as Washington's fazy lieutenant governor, Victor Aloysius Meyers arrived at the capitol to become acting governor. But with a wide grin, the self styled "good will ambassador" barged in on the executive offices to become head man for a few hours. Meanwhile, Governor Clarence D. Martin flew to Portland for a tri-state conference.

"Kinda bank those flowers around the desk," said the Seattle bandmaster as his picture was about to be taken. "You know, good will offerings."

Then as the slightly drooping lilies and hydrangeas of Easter memory were placed on the desk, he relaxed importantly in the official chair of the state executive.

"You know chief," he said to the governor, "they tell me this is quite an occasion. I understand there has not been an acting governor in more than eight years."

"Sure," playfully agreed the governor. "Now you can pardon your friend Doc Hamilton." Hamilton is a Seattle negro night club owner who is serving a term in the penitentiary for violation of gambling and prohibition laws.

Although obviously excited over the prospect of acting governor for a few hours, Meyers insisted he came here "on business." He was dressed in a blue double breasted suit, polka dot tie, and the jaunty mustache was waxed to needle sharpness.

Only once did ex-Governor Hartley leave the state. On that occasion his lieutenant governor authorized a pardon in opposition to his wishes. He never left again for fear the administration would be disrupted.

Washington's flying governor left the offices in charge of Meyers while he took a private plane from Olympia to attend a conference with Oregon and Idaho governors in Portland. He was accompanied by his young son and his secretary. He will confer over joint development of Columbia and Snake river transportation.

Governor Meyers is to leave this week on a "good will tour" of California.

Cloture Club Again Swings Over Senate

warned that the maximum inflation under the bill would aggregate $14,000,000,000 if all its provisions were made operative. He denied he intended to filibuster the bill but promised that he and his colleagues would "speak our minds" in the hope of turning the country against it.

Reed arrived at his estimate of $14,000,000,000 as follows:

- $3,000,000,000 currency expansion through purchase of government securities by federal reserve banks.
- $3,000,000,000 currency inflation by printing United States notes for purchase and retirement of government obligation.
- $8,000,000,000 inflation by reducing the gold content of the dollar and thereby making existing gold reserve eligible to back that much more currency.

He added that to the $6,000,000,000 of currency now outstanding and said the bill, if fully exercised, would raise the aggregate outstanding currency issue to $20,000,000,000.

Reed characterized the United States notes as "printing press money."

Disclaiming any intention of filibuster, Reed said he believed the senate could dispose of the inflation-farm relief bill by Wednesday.

Amelia Earhart Takes Mrs. Roosevelt Flying

Pilots Transport Plane in Evening Gown

First Lady of Air Doesn't Even Take Off White Gloves to Try New Airplane

Washington, Apr. 21.—(AP)—A slim, quiet, woman in white evening dress took Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt on a flight over Washington and Baltimore last night without even taking off her white kid gloves as she piloted the big transport plane.

The first lady of the air, Amelia Earhart, was at the controls part of the time on the first night flight made here by the first lady of the land.

"Just as safe," Mrs. Roosevelt replied when some one asked her if she felt as secure with a woman pilot as she usually felt on her frequent air trips. "I'd give a lot to do it myself," she added.

Mrs. Roosevelt went to the control cabin to watch Miss Earhart pilot the ship and remained during most of the rest of the hour's trip, explaining that there she felt "on top of the world, with an unobstructed view."

Miss Earhart flew to Washington from New York with her husband, George Palmer Putnam. They dined at the White House and then made the flight in a sparkling night in which the lights of the cities, the illuminated dome of the capitol, the shaft of the Washington monument, and the portico of the White House shone clear.

Mrs. Roosevelt wore an "Eleanor blue" dinner dress, a black and gold evening wrap, and a blue straw hat. Miss Earhart was hostess and wore a black velvet evening wrap over her white evening dress.

Other passengers were Hall Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt's brother; airline officials and newspaper reporters. It was the first passenger flight of a new insulated plane, in which noise has been greatly reduced.

BLIZZARD SWEEPS MOUNTAIN STATES

Many Wyoming Highways Blocked by Snow

Denver, Colo., Apr. 21.—(AP)—A blinding blizzard raged today from the Canadian line to Denver on the eastern side of the continental divide. South of Denver the snow turned to rain. Heavy downpours also occurred in Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri. Slight snow that melted as fast as it fell, was reported from Montrose, Colo., in the western Rockies, but Salt Lake City enjoyed a warm, balmy spring day.

Roads in all directions out of Casper, Wyo., center of the storm, were blocked. C. H. Bowman, state highway commissioner, saw little prospect of opening them immediately. Sheriff Housley of Casper was forced to abandon efforts to reach several isolated sections in which he feared several persons were marooned.

Sheriff James G. Biggins of Golden, Colo., was unable to make any progress in a search for six Denver picknickers, marooned in Coal Creek canyon where they went for a beef-steak fry Wednesday night.

Clearing weather in Wyoming but freezing temperatures in Colorado were forecast for tonight by the United States weather bureau.

Burlington passenger trains were re-routed over Northwestern railroad tracks from Douglas to Casper and running eight hours late in freezing temperatures. Buses also lagged and airplane flights were abandoned.

Thunder, hail and high wind ushered the storm into Colorado late Thursday.

Highway travel was dangerous, warned Robert Higgins, maintenance engineer of the Colorado highway department. Five foot drifts blocked the Denver-Bailey road, and the Denver-Boulder road also was impassable.

Breeding new water-lilies is a comparatively recent accomplishment, says the Missouri botanical garden bulletin, adding that the first hybrid was created in 1851.

CREDIT AID IS FIRST ON LIST

Hope to Avoid Use of Radical Plan

Roosevelt Anxious to Proceed First Along Credit Lines, Reported

Washington, Apr. 21.—(AP)—Credit expansion up to $3,000,000,000 through the federal reserve system will be the first step of President Roosevelt under the terms of the Thomas bill for revaluation of the dollar, the United Press learned authoritatively today.

At the same time it was said that there would be an adjustment of conditions to obviate the necessity of utilizing the more radical provisions of the bill.

Associates of Roosevelt, however, felt that he would sound out the British attitude on the provision authorizing this country to accept $100,000,000 in silver in payment of foreign debts. This subject, it is expected, will be broached without delay in the conference on world economic matters that will be started at the White House tonight.

Friends pointed out that it was logical for Roosevelt to proceed first along the lines of credit expansion. They argued that was a direct step toward reviving a stagnant industry and also a way of bolstering commodity prices.

It was reported that the administration also was desirous as soon as possible to create a favorable balance in its export trade with other nations.

Roosevelt would expand credit, under the terms of the bill, through federal reserve banks, but if this fails then he would have the power to effect the same thing through the issuance of treasury notes to replace government bonds.

Uppermost in his mind is the desire to see the increase in commodity prices which he holds the key to solution of the depression in the country's basic industries.

There was the growing feeling today in administration circles that enactment of the Thomas bill might accomplish at one fell swoop the purposes of the farm commodity price bill and the amendment for refinancing of farm mortgages.

Taxi Driver Names Kimzey As Assailant

passed a few miles out, Kimzey said "No, you'd get there too soon."

Knocked Unconscious
Harrison said he started to raise himself from the ground with his hands and was struck over the left eye by Kimzey. He was knocked unconscious and returned to consciousness to find he was being dragged by the feet. While he was still in a semi-consciousness state Kimzey, referred to by Harrison as "the passenger", forced him to take some liquid from a bottle which burned his lips, made him completely unconscious and later very sick.

Harrison said he came up looking up in the sky, discovered he was resting on his head and shoulders with his feet in the air and that his hands and feet were tied with halting wire. He managed to free his hands and feet, crawled out of the cistern and after resting for a time went on to the Last Chance ranch.

Harold Kline told of a man coming to Downing's cafe on the morning in question, getting breakfast and asking for a taxi driver to take him 60 miles east of Bend. Kline stated he was not positive that Kimzey was the man.

Grover Caldwell said he had known Kimzey as Lee Collins, had attended a show with him the night before and was told Collins planned to go out on the desert after saddle and pack horses to be used at Lava lakes.

The court twice sustained objections to repetition of questions on the part of Farnham. In each case the defense attorney was attempting to break down identification of Kimzey.
