Roosevelt Launches Drive to Add to Purchasing Power of America

every city, hamlet and cross roads in the country. This work through churches, clubs, and radio and poster displays, will be carried on intensively throughout the summer and fall.

Employers supporting the president's program will be given insignias. All citizens are asked to patronize stores and industries which cooperate.

Preparations for the stupendous undertaking of raising mass purchasing power through cooperative effort such as is called forth in times of war, have been going on for weeks. Most of the plans have been revealed in advance through United Press dispatches. But the actual start of the campaign was a combination of dramatic circumstances and sheer simplicity.

Johnson Summoned

Administration Hugh S. Johnson, head of the national recovery administration, has worked on the program for days. Finally it was ready for the president.

Johnson was at dinner last night at the Carlton hotel, his Washington home, when a messenger arrived from the White House. A batch of documents was hurried through the lane of diners to the general's table. Johnson glanced at them and called his chauffeur.

At 9 p. m., Johnson reached the White House. Two hours later he emerged.

"Well," he said, "it's O. K."

The appeal for public cooperation was started today with telegrams from Johnson to presidents of the chambers of commerce in every city of more than 10,000 population in the United States. He urged them to take the initiative in forming local campaign committees to carry on the drive.

Plan District Boards

Accompanying the president's appeal and the form of the so-called "blanket code" was bulletin No. 3, issued by Johnson. This provided for creating of one district recovery board of seven members for each district of the department of commerce, to be appointed by the president. The 24 district managers of the department of commerce will act as board secretaries. Each board will consist of one person prominent in each of the following activities: manufacturing, retail trade, wholes-sale trade, banking, farming, labor and social service.

Each state will have a recovery board of nine members, appointed by the president and serving without compensation. They will represent commercial, industrial, labor and civic interests. Serving with the state boards will be state recovery councils, whose function will be to recommend organization activity to the boards and devise means of perfecting and strengthening the N.R.A. organizations.

Care of Woolens and Furs Pays Dividends

Corvallis, July 21.—(Special)—One excellent way to help the family finances is to take care of the things the family already has, says Azaela Sager, of O. S. C., which is probably the collegiate way of expressing the old saying that "a penny saved is a penny earned." What Miss Sager is referring to in this instance, however, is the advisability of protecting woolens and furs from the ravages of moths during the summer.

In her capacity of extension specialist in clothing and textiles, Miss Sager has gathered suggestions together designed to assist the homemaker in protecting things made of wool, hair, feathers or fur, as all these are attacked by the common clothing moth.

The first line of defense is frequent inspection, with brushing, beating, sunning and cleaning. The eggs of the moths are delicate and can usually be destroyed easily. Sunning is always a valuable aid, while dry-cleaning or laundering will destroy either the eggs or the larvae.

Of course, it is the larva or worm stage in which the moths do the damage. The moth itself is a small, buff-colored miller with a half-inch wingspread, and seen usually flitting about in dark places. Its chief business after becoming an adult is to lay eggs and many of them—as high as 300 in the 30 to 40 days of its life. These are deposited inside a pocket, under pleats, in folds of blankets, or similar secluded places. These eggs hatch in from three to four days under favorable conditions.

Once cleaned, fabrics may be protected indefinitely by being wrapped in paper or stored in tight closets or chests. Ordinary firm wrapping paper will do, or several thicknesses of newspapers will serve very well.

Naphthalene, the basis of the old familiar moth balls, may be purchased in flake form and is very effective for protecting clothing in tight closets, trunks and chests, says Miss Sager. The flakes, sprinkled throughout clothing, give off fumes that destroy all stages of moths.

Paradichlorobenzene—which fruit growers know as "paradi"—and is recommended as equally effective used the same way as naphthalene.

TOUHY IS HELD AS FACTOR KIDNAPER

Gang Leader is Caught by Unarmed Policeman

Chicago, July 21.—(UP)—Roger Touhy, desperate little gang leader who robbed the old Capone mob of much of its power, was held under strong guard with three of his henchmen today, accused of the kidnaping of John (Jake) Barber, Factor here and of William Hamm, Jr., in St. Paul.

Three machine gun squads of Chicago police went to Elkhorn, Wis., where the gangsters were captured by an unarmed rookie policeman, to return them to Chicago.

The serial numbers of $1,730 in 10 and 20 dollar bills found on the men were taken, to be checked with numbers of $50,000 in bills of the same denomination paid for Factor's release.

Police Chief Thomas Dahill of St. Paul was expected here today to question the men regarding the Hamm kidnaping. Hamm, a wealthy brewer, was held captive until payment of ransom near Lake Geneva, 20 miles south of Elkhorn.

Factor was held captive in the same territory, it was believed.

Federal agents said that charges of kidnaping Factor would be filed against the men immediately. Chief Dahill also said he would file charges.

William C. Chenoweth Is Member of Group of 415

West Point, New York, July 21.—(Special)—William C. Chenoweth of Bend, who was sworn in as a cadet at the U. S. military academy here on July 1, has been assigned to the fifth company by Major General W. D. Connor, superintendent. The total strength of Chenoweth's class is 415.

For the next six weeks Chenoweth and his classmates will receive an intensive course of instruction in various military subjects including both drills and lectures. Early in August, the class will be absorbed into the corps of cadets and will participate in the impressive parades which are held daily.

In the middle of August, the new cadets will take a five day practice march through the foothills of the Catskills, southwest of West Point. During the march they will live in shelter tents and eat from rolling kitchens.

The academic year will open September 1. Classroom work will start at 8 a. m. and will extend until 3 p. m., with an hour's intermission for lunch. Drills and compulsory intramural athletics will take up another hour in the afternoon. For the academic work the class will be divided into sections of from 10 to 14 cadets and each man will be required to recite in each subject every day.

SALES AT RETAIL CONTINUE UPWARD

Dun and Bradstreet Issue Weekly Review

New York, July 21.—(UP)—The weekly review of Dun and Bradstreet, Inc., issued today viewed the reaction in commodity and security markets as "a temporary relaxation of speculative enthusiasm which merely has paused to gather strength for a fresh revival," and found nothing to indicate a lull in general business activity.

"Another flood of reports, testifying to the continued betterment in general business and the extension of productive operations into the usual holiday season appeared this week," the review said.

"While reports from all sections of the country revealed an extension of manufacturing activity, there was less uniformity as to the increase in wholesale buying. Retail sales, on the other hand, have continued steadily upward, with new records for the current season being made in agricultural districts, where early crops have been marketed. In fact, buying appears to be increasing more rapidly than it decreased during some stages of the period of economic adjustment."

"In some districts retail sales are making the best comparative showing in three years. Unsold merchandise held by manufacturers and distributors has thus far not become of burdensome proportions, and its early depletion is the aim of the administration in hastening application of codes and expanding purchasing power."

The review also noted:

Consumer demand is expanding; retail prices are beginning to move up with wholesale; wholesalers report brisk demand for all lines of spot merchandise; grocers report increased business; orders for furniture are mounting with business at the highest volume in three years and prices rising; production in some of the basic industries already has passed the comparative peaks of 1932 and 1931 and are well on to the 1930 levels; production of automobiles gives no indication of a summer recession.

In the search for better disinfectants against livestock diseases, government scientists have found sodium orthophenylphenate effective against tuberculosis germs.
